Welcome,

Welcome to this performance of Hershey Felder’s Beethoven, As I Knew Him. We’re thrilled that this virtuoso author, actor and pianist has chosen to premiere this new work at The Old Globe. In addition, Mr. Felder treats us to a reprise of his previously sold-out Globe shows, George Gershwin Alone and Monsieur Chopin, immediately following Beethoven. Don’t miss this chance to see all three parts of Hershey Felder’s “The Composer Sonata”!

The summer is fast approaching, an eventful time at the Globe. Our 2008 Summer Season begins with the repertory format Shakespeare Festival, featuring Romeo and Juliet, The Merry Wives of Windsor, and All’s Well That Ends Well. We’re also looking forward to two exciting new productions, The Pleasure of His Company, directed by Co-Artistic Director Darko Tresnjak, on the Shiley Stage in the Globe, and Sight Unseen, by Pulitzer Prize winner Donald Margulies, at the specially-built arena theatre in the James S. Copley Auditorium at the San Diego Museum of Art.

In July, we will break ground for the construction of the Conrad Prebys Theatre Center, featuring a state-of-the-art arena stage, education center, and plaza. The Old Globe is proud to recognize the generous donors who have helped us reach this momentous point in the Globe’s history. The Capital Campaign, launched in 2006 with the announcement of the lead gift from Donald and Darlene Shiley, has now raised over 75% of its goal. As the hammers ring out this summer, we need crucial support to complete the Campaign and secure the future of The Old Globe for the 21st century.

You can play an important role in helping us reach this goal — and record your support of The Old Globe in lasting fashion. We are offering donors the opportunity to underwrite a limited number of personalized granite pavers, to be installed in the newly-redesigned Copley Plaza in front of the Globe’s three theatres. The pavers will be the focal point of the plaza’s graceful circular design, to be enjoyed by millions of Globe patrons and Balboa Park visitors for decades to come.

Your contribution to the paver campaign will also help us meet a very important challenge. The Globe has been awarded a $1 million Challenge Grant by the nationally-renowned Kresge Foundation. To qualify for this grant, the Globe must raise $9 million in new or increased gifts. Your purchase of a paver will help us reach this goal, win the grant — and complete our Capital Campaign. Your help is critical to this effort! To learn more about how you can participate, please call the Globe’s Development Office at (619) 231-1941 ext. 2317.

Thank you for choosing to be with us in 2008. We’ll be breaking ground — theatrically and literally! — this summer. We hope you will be back often to share in the excitement!

Dear Friends,

I am pleased to welcome you to the return of Hershey Felder with Beethoven, As I Knew Him. It is a tribute to The Old Globe and its audiences that Mr. Felder has chosen to premiere this exciting work here.

This summer we will begin construction for the Globe’s new facilities, which include a new education center for expanded education and outreach programs, a new arena stage offering enhanced technical capabilities and increased audience comfort, as well as a gorgeous new plaza.

With construction beginning, we are entering the final phase of our Capital and Endowment Campaign. With extremely generous leadership support from Donald and Darlene Shiley, Conrad Prebys, and our Board of Directors, the Campaign has reached 75% of goal. To help the Globe complete the final, most challenging phase of the campaign, the nationally-renowned Kresge Foundation has awarded us a Challenge Grant of $1 million to secure community support.

Elsewhere in this program (see page p10) you can read about a special opportunity to assist the Campaign and leave the imprint of your support for The Old Globe for future generations with the purchase of a personalized granite paver in the central plaza. I invite you to join with the Globe family at this crucial juncture and help us meet the Kresge Challenge.

P6 PERFORMANCES MAGAZINE
Author's Note

by Hershey Felder

Beethoven, As I Knew Him

In the spring of 1998, armed with an education as both an actor and as a pianist, I had the idea that perhaps combining both crafts to create musical characters who both tell their stories and play their music, may be of interest to those who enjoy the classical arts. Little did I know that over the next decade, these characters would be appearing on stages all over the world; that over a million audience members would be singing the music of Gershwin as if they were at a soiree way back when; that patrons would become aristocrats in the elegant salons of Paris in the 1800s and take part in the grand traditions of the time; and that so many of those who have already taken part, would continue along on the journey back in time to the world of Ludwig van Beethoven, the greatest composer to have ever lived.

What I have seen over the years is that audiences are thirsting to understand the context of the creation of great art, for the greatest of art generally comes from the simplest and most honest of means. I often think of Shakespeare presenting his newest works to the masses, and the audience participation on the floor. Today we may study these works for their hidden secrets, but in their time, the works were simple, direct, and honest expressions of a straightforward story. If one looks at any work of art that has lasted, the through-line is undoubtedly the humanity, clarity and simplicity of the work. If my travels across the globe presenting these works to many different cultures have taught me anything, it is that people are people the world over. We all love to dream, we all love to learn, and we all love to feel included. And so it has been my goal with these three works, George Gershwin Alone, Monsieur Chopin and Beethoven, As I Knew Him, that make up our “Composer Sonata” — a trilogy of three movements, styled largely in the form of a classical sonata.

Traditionally, the Sonata is a musical puzzle structured to create maximum emotional and intellectual effect on the listener. With its first movement, it explores the dramatic and the highly structured (Beethoven, As I Knew Him); the second, Romance (Monsieur Chopin); and the third, an extroverted dance-like celebration and finale (George Gershwin Alone). Over the years, I would hear the odd argument every now and then that great works of art should be presented in the purest of forms and should be allowed to speak for themselves, and most certainly don’t need a writer and actor to illuminate the story of the works’ creation. My response has always been that we artists spend every breathing moment of our lifetimes living and reliving every one of these simply human stories; relishing each and every new detail of the personal aspect of a composer or artist’s life; being excited at the simple discovery of a composer’s choice of why this note over that...small details that give us artists the greatest pleasure in the world. Well then, why only present a finished product when so much of the joy comes from the learning? While we all may love to be entertained, for me, in the end, what makes us particularly human is that we all love to learn, even the smallest simplest detail about another life — for those details are what connects us all.

Thank you for joining me over the years and for sharing.

— Hershey Felder
Ludwig van Beethoven
(1770 - 1827)

One of the greatest composers in music history, Ludwig van Beethoven lived a tumultuous life marked by erratic fortunes, estranged relationships, and his failing health. Though he is celebrated for his compositions, which shaped the traditions of classical music, he is remembered as a troubled and belligerent man, tortured by his hearing loss and his sense of impending death.

Beethoven was born in Bonn, Germany in 1770. He was baptized on December 17th, but the actual date of his birthday is not known for certain. He first studied piano as a child with his father Johann, who was a singer and musician. His next teacher, the court organist Christian Gottlob Neefe, was perhaps the most instrumental in developing the young artist, helping him to publish his first composition.

In his mid-teens, he traveled to Vienna to study with Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, but was quickly called back home to be with his mother, who was dying of tuberculosis. She died shortly thereafter, and Beethoven then became the primary guardian to his two younger brothers, as his father grew more and more addicted to alcohol. The young Beethoven never had a chance to study with Mozart, who died before he could return to Vienna.

When he did return five years later, Beethoven studied with Joseph Haydn, Johann Georg Albrechtsberger, and Antonio Salieri. By 1793, he had established himself as a piano virtuoso, and was able to support himself through a combination of annual stipends, monetary gifts from the aristocracy, and income from concerts, lessons, and the sales of his works. During this early part of his career, he composed such classics as his Pathetique Sonata and his Piano Sonata No. 14, better known as the Moonlight Sonata. Despite the popularity of his work, he remained financially unstable; often his patrons reneged on their pledges to support him, or passed away before paying him anything.

Perhaps the most devastating turn of events for Beethoven, however, was the gradual but severe deterioration of his hearing. He was only 26 when the hearing loss began, and by 1802, he realized that the condition was incurable and would only get worse. Although his hearing loss complicated his financial struggles, as it limited the number of concerts that he could conduct, it did not stop him from continuing to compose. He entered a — Letter to F G Wegeler, 1801, with regard to his deafness

“I shall seize Fate by the throat; it shall certainly not bend and crush me completely.”

“When I open my eyes I must sigh, for what I see is contrary to my religion, and I must despise the world which does not know that music is a higher revelation than all wisdom and philosophy.”
— Quoted by Bettina von Arnin, letter to Goethe, 1810
new phase of creativity known as his “middle period.” During this time, he composed the Eroica Symphony, his ode to the ideals of the French Revolution. He also composed the unforgettable Symphony No. 5, which began with the four notes that evoked “fate knocking on the door.”

By 1817 he entered his “late period,” during which his style became more innovative and personal, as evidenced by his Symphony No. 9 and his Grosse Fuge. His deafness was nearly complete at this point; at the end of the premiere of his Symphony No. 9, he reportedly had to be turned around to witness the enthusiastic applause of the audience. Instead of elation, however, he wept, realizing that he could not hear them.

To exacerbate his suffering, he endured a family crisis. His brother Karl died of tuberculosis, leaving a nine year-old son. Beethoven fought a custody battle with the child’s mother, eventually winning sole guardianship of his nephew. The battle continued for years, and the teenaged Karl eventually attempted suicide to escape his uncle, who was allegedly abusive in his upbringing. Karl survived and returned to his mother. Beethoven also suffered a string of broken romantic relationships, often because the object of his affection was either married or engaged. The identity of his “Immortal Beloved,” to whom he wrote a long love letter in 1812, was never identified, although it is believed that she was Antonie Brentano, the wife of a wealthy friend of Beethoven’s.

He was depressed and, at times, suicidal. His pain was exacerbated by the alienation from his own music, his inadequate finances, and his failed relationships. In 1827, he fell severely ill, perhaps in part due to lead poisoning and he died on March 26 in the middle of a thunderstorm. Despite the turbulent affairs of his personal life, his funeral was attended by over 10,000 people, consisting of fans, admirers, and friends. The legacy of his life’s work remains a benchmark in the history of classical music.

Jeffrey Kallberg (Production Consultant)

Jeffrey Kallberg (Ph.D., University of Chicago) is a specialist in music of the 19th and 20th centuries, editorial theory, critical theory, and gender studies. Kallberg has published widely on the music and cultural contexts of Chopin, most notably in his book, Chopin at the Boundaries: Sex, History, and Musical Genre (Harvard University Press). His critical edition of Luisa Miller, for the Works of Giuseppe Verdi, has been performed throughout the U.S. and internationally. His current projects include a book on Chopin and the culture of the nocturne, an examination of the convergences of sex and music around 1800, and a study of Scandinavian song in the first half of the twentieth century. Kallberg was elected Vice President of the American Musicological Society for the term 2004-2006. He served as Review Editor of the Journal of American Musicological Society and is presently general editor of New Perspectives in Music History and Criticism (Cambridge University Press). He has won numerous awards for his publications, and received fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation. He has also twice been guest-of-honor at the International Fryderyk Chopin Competition in Warsaw, Poland. In 2005, the Palmer Theological Seminary called upon Kallberg to identify and authenticate an autographed manuscript of Beethoven’s Grosse Fuge that was discovered in their library. The manuscript, one of the last that Beethoven completed, preserves fascinating evidence of his compositional thinking; its reappearance after some 115 years caused considerable excitement across the musical world. In December 2005, the manuscript sold at auction for nearly $1.9 million.

Samantha F. Voxakis (Executive Director/G.M., 88LLC)

Samantha is a proud native of Baltimore MD, where her twelve years with the Baltimore Orioles included a number of extraordinary events, including the opening of Camden Yards and Cal Ripken’s 2131 game. When not keeping busy with the day-to-day operations of 88LLC, she enjoys cooking, travel, and theatre. There was a time she took great pleasure in playing the piano; however, she has given it up as comparisons to Hershey’s playing are simply too painful. With special thanks to Mr. Felder, the GGA-MC LA, James, and The Family.

Eighty-Eight Entertainment, LLC (Producer)

Eighty-Eight Entertainment was created in 2001 by Hershey Felder, and is devoted to the creation of new works of music theatre. Grosses bis à notre famille à Paris…Marie-Helen et Alexis, Théone et Catherine, Marie-Victoire, Saucha Poliakoff, Cédric, Shura, Chianta, Matteo Rius, et Amelia Caritico, ainsi que les membres de l'entreprise “BaSa” (!) – Carole Boué et Gilles Sieg.

An important thank you to Lee and Claire Kaufman and their family who, besides having driven, flown and even walked through the most dreadful weather to support our performances (it all started way back when with a terrible storm in Philadelphia that had Lee wandering off the street into a performance of George Gershwin Alone…) The Kaufman family have been production supporters since the very beginning. I can only express how lucky and grateful I am, not only for their support, but for their friendship.

A particular and heartfelt thank you to my team of devoted artists, many of whom have been with me through dozens of productions all over the world – Matt Manden, GiGi Garcia, Rich Newwood, James Wilson, Francine-F Pierre-Courte, Nerrice, Wawowski, Andrew Wildier, Yael Pardess, Michael Gilliam, Guy Casper, John Boesche, Erik Curtensens, Christopher Ash, Peter Mordelli – without whom none of our work would be possible; David Cap and the staff of the Arizona Theatre Company Scene Shop; the Entire Staff of The Old Globe.

A special thank you to Candie and Joel Zwick, Joel Zwick “Alone” – Joel, without whom there would be nothing but wandering art. Joel Zwick has always referred to himself as a “funny little man.” Indeed, that he is, but he is also, and more so, a great artist, an endless thinker, and a director’s director whose goal is not to impose his own “lofty ideas” on a work of art, but to rid the work of all forms of pretense so that the expression breathes as it must – naturally, honestly, and as what it is.

A very special and personal Thank You to my Greek family, Samantha, Mom, Dad, and Chris Voxakis. As you have often implied, “When my people were writing philosophy, your people were still swinging from trees.” (Gus, MBFGW)

Without you, Eighty-Eight Entertainment would not exist. And many thanks to the rest of the auxiliary – Rosalinda, Sandy, and Cheryl - for their support over the years and across the miles.

My father and stepmother, Jack and Lea, my sister and brother-in-law, Tammy and Kevin and their dear child Avery, with the next one on the way in good time…

And of course, to those who are everything - ...

Chance and KIM (XXOO).

This theatre operates under an agreement between the League of Resident Theatres and Actors’ Equity Association, the union of professional actors and stage managers in the United States.

The Directors are members of the Society of Stage Directors and Choreographers, an independent national labor union.

This Theatre is represented by United Scenic Artists Local USA-826, IATSE.

The scenic, costume, lighting and sound designers in LORIT Theatre are represented by United Scenic Artists Local No. 524.

This theatre is supported by the International Alliance of THEATRE Stage Employees Local 524.
The house lights dim. Before the curtain rises or the stage is lit, music swells and you hear distant sounds of the sea. Sound is the first element of most performances, and before anything else happens, a mood is set, a location is indicated, and you begin to enter the world of the play.

Everything you hear on stage — sometimes including the actors’ voices — is brought to you by the Sound Department through its two related functions, sound design and sound engineering.

The Sound Designer creates a “soundscape” for a production, a score of music and sound effects that make up the aural environment of the play. This process starts before rehearsals even begin, with the director and sound designer consulting to determine the atmosphere, setting, and actions that must be created and supported by the sound score. Then the designer draws upon a vast library to produce the needed sound. Music may be recorded or live, a well-known piece or something composed especially for the production. For all the other sounds, The Old Globe’s library includes 200,000 individual sound effects.

But sometimes the perfect sound hasn’t yet been recorded and then the sound designer must find or create it. For example, for the 2006 production of Pig Farm, sound designer Paul Peterson spent three days at a large commercial pig farm, recording the sounds of hundreds of pigs eating, fighting, and “romancing.” Then he visited trained show pigs at the Del Mar Fairgrounds, to capture specific vocalizations — an entire pig vocabulary of snorts and squeals. So even though not a single pig appears on stage, the play’s sound evokes the farm setting, with a vivid sense that, just out of sight, the place is teeming with hogs, sows, and piglets.

Each night in the theatre, those sounds are triggered by the Sound Engineer, who operates a mixing console connected to a network of sound equipment. Selecting the best equipment for the desired sound quality is another crucial element of sound design. If there is live music, each instrument may need a different kind of microphone to best capture its unique sound. If the actors’ voices will be amplified, the sound designer must work with the costume designer to fit wireless transmitters into costumes (women often wear them in their wigs!). The microphone elements are then hidden in the actors’ hairline or over the ear. The right speakers for broadcasting the types of sound needed must be chosen and located on stage and in the theatre. In Dancing in the Dark, for example, there were 53 separate speakers, many of them concealed in elements of the set. Controlling the quality and volume of sound that goes into the mixing console and out of each of those speakers to achieve the perfect mix of sound in the theatre is the domain of the Sound Engineer. During technical rehearsals, the Engineer works side-by-side with the Designer to create the desired mix, which is then replicated in each performance thereafter.

To coordinate the sound with the action on stage during every performance, the Stage Manager, watching the stage from a booth in the back of the theatre, cues the sound engineer (as well as lights and other stage effects). A play typically averages around 100 individual sound cues; Pig Farm had approximately 600, an average of one every 10 seconds or so! Fortunately, many of these may be combined into automated sequences with digital equipment, allowing the sound engineer to set off a chain of sound effects and volume fades with one motion. A single word in a stage direction, for example, “storm,” may actually be as many as 15 individual sounds, blending together different levels of thunder, rain, and wind to create the particular storm the audience experiences.

In Shakespeare’s day, people going to the theatre said they were going “to hear a play.” Our more visual culture may say we “see” a play, but what we hear has a powerful impact on how we experience it. And, no less than those elements we do see, such as sets and costumes, the sounds we absorb while engrossed in a performance are designed, created, and produced by talented and skilled artists and technicians, essential members of The Old Globe’s creative team.
A visitor to Balboa Park on a Saturday morning must choose from a smorgasbord of options to fill his or her day. Fantastic museums that specialize in art, cars, airplanes, trains, sports, photography, science, anthropology, history and plants beckon the traveler with their fascinating collections. If museums aren’t enough, visitors can explore the animals of the world at the famed San Diego Zoo — an all day diversion that shouldn’t be missed. Or perhaps a sunny ramble through the many gardens and trails will serve to while away a lovely San Diego morning.

But there is one more fascinating way to spend a weekend morning in Balboa Park. If you stroll up to our renowned theatres on a Saturday or Sunday morning, you will be greeted by one of our numerous docents who will extend a warm welcome and an invitation to tour the inner sanctum of The Old Globe.

Behind the Scenes Tours take you behind the curtain and beyond the footlights to explore the backstage spaces where theatrical magic is created. You’ll tour the costume shop, the sound and lighting controls, the “trap” under the stage, and the Green Room where the actors await their cues.

Here’s a bit of what our fabulous docents will reveal:

- The reason for the “ghost light” that stands on the stage when no one is there.
- The materials used to make the Grinch’s hairy, green suit.
- The “two faces” of Shakespeare.
- What equity, dogs, totus mundis agit histrionem, proscenium, and vomitorium have to do with The Old Globe.

The Behind the Scenes Tours take place each Saturday and Sunday at 10:30 a.m. (production schedule permitting). No reservations are needed; just arrive and enjoy. Weekday tours for social and community groups can also be scheduled.

Some groups prefer to focus on Shakespeare for their tours so The Old Globe provides a wonderful exploration of his plays in our Follow the Bard Tour. This educational tour starts on the plaza where groups look for faces in the fountain and benches to begin their discussion of several Shakespearean characters.

Once inside the theatres participants scramble to discover hidden props and costumes from many of our past Shakespeare productions. These articles provide the springboard for discussions about the plays and the period in which they were written. There’s nothing like the moment when a student discovers a massive, embroidered skirt and feels its weight and bulk as he gently carries it from its hiding place and displays it for the rest of the group. Or the glee in a child’s eyes when the tour guide smiles and says, “Yes, go ahead and pick up that beautiful prop and look it over!” There are many places where one is not allowed to touch anything but on this tour, “hands-on” is the name of the game. And when exploration is allowed, learning begins.

The Follow the Bard Tour ends in the Lowell Davies Festival Theatre, home to the Globe’s renowned Summer Shakespeare Festival, with the distribution of posters and other mementos of the experience and a packet of materials that teachers can use to extend the learning in the classroom. Following this tour, most students will be able to answer the many questions in our “Shakespeare Soccer Game” with ease and delight. But don’t try it before the tour; even Shakespeare devotees will find some of the questions tricky.

The Old Globe’s Education Department strives to meet the learning needs of visitors of all ages. From youngsters just finding out that live theatre exists, to senior citizens who’ve been lifelong theatre lovers but have never set foot backstage, our tours expose a world of fascination right here in beautiful Balboa Park. Come and visit some weekend morning and you’ll still have time to ramble in the sunshine afterward.

For more information on The Old Globe’s Education programs and our tours, please contact Roberta Wells-Famula, Director of Education at (619) 238-0043 x2144.

— Roberta Wells-Famula, Director of Education
The Old Globe’s ability to maintain the highest standard of excellence, while keeping ticket prices affordable, is due in large part to the financial support of more than 3,500 individuals, businesses, foundations and government agencies. Please join us in giving a warm thanks and recognition to these leaders who have made tonight and our 625 other performances possible. The Old Globe appreciates the support of those who have stepped into the spotlight.

LOUIS G. SPISTO
CEO/Executive Producer

Louis G. Spisto has led The Old Globe since October, 2002. During his tenure, Spisto spearheaded the return of the Shakespeare Repertory Season and brought to the Globe several new musicals, including the critically-acclaimed A Catered Affair, the launch of the national tour of the Tony Award-winning Avenue Q and the Broadway transfers of Chita Rivera: The Dancer’s Life, and the Twyla Tharp/Bob Dylan musical, THE TIMES THEY ARE A-CHANGIN’. He has produced over 75 plays and musicals, including Dirty Rotten Scoundrels, the west coast premiere of the Tony-winning play Take Me Out and the annual holiday favorite, Dr. Seuss’ How the Grinch Stole Christmas! Spisto has managed the Globe’s Capital Campaign to raise $75 million by the Theatre’s 75th anniversary in 2010. Launched in March 2006, the campaign has reached 75% of its goal to date. During the past four seasons, the Globe has grown its subscription audience an unprecedented amount, resulting in the highest level of attendance in over a decade. The Globe was also recently named the best professional theatre in the country.

Jerry Patch was appointed Resident Artistic Director of The Old Globe in February 2005, during which time he brought to the Theatre works by such renowned playwrights as Amy Freed, Richard Greenberg and Donald Margulies. In the past three seasons, eleven world premières and two second productions of new works have been presented, including A Body of Water, winner of the 2006 Best New American Play Award. He previously served as the Dramaturge and a member of the long-standing artistic team at the Tony Award-winning South Coast Repertory (SCR), where he coordinated the development of 150 new plays, including two Pulitzer Prize winners and numerous other Pulitzer finalists. While at SCR, Patch worked as Dramaturg on numerous new works, including Donald Margulies’ Sight Unseen and Brooklyn Boy, which recently opened to critical acclaim on Broadway, and has produced over 75 plays and musicals throughout his college and graduate school training as an actor, director and producer in New York City at Arizona State University, the University of Notre Dame, and spent many years as the Executive Director of the Pacific Symphony Orchestra in Orange County. During his tenure there, he tripled the orchestra’s annual budget, while eliminating a prior deficit and successfully completing the orchestra’s first endowment campaign. In addition, he established a series of innovative recording projects with Sony Classical and oversaw a number of nationally recognized commissioning projects. He has held the Masters degree from the University of Wisconsin in Arts Administration and a Bachelors of Business Administration from the University of Notre Dame, and spent many years directing, producing and as an actor in plays and musicals throughout his college and graduate school years, as well as in professional summer theatre.
