Welcome to this performance! Following the success of Hershey Felder’s brilliant premiere of Beethoven, As I Knew Him last month, we’re thrilled that he is completing his trilogy, “The Composer Sonata,” with performances of Monsieur Chopin and George Gershwin Alone. Globe audiences are the first in the world to have the opportunity to see all three parts of the trilogy in succession. Since both Monsieur Chopin and George Gershwin Alone previously had sold-out runs at the Globe, we knew San Diego’s discriminating audiences would love this musical and theatrical treat!

The summer is fast approaching, an eventful time at the Globe. Our 2008 Summer Season begins with the repertory format Shakespeare Festival, featuring Romeo and Juliet, The Merry Wives of Windsor, and All’s Well That Ends Well. We’re also looking forward to two exciting new productions, The Pleasure of His Company, directed by Resident Artistic Director Darko Tresnjak, on the Shiley Stage in the Globe, and Sight Unseen, by Pulitzer Prize winner Donald Margulies, at the specially-built arena theatre in the James S. Copley Auditorium at the San Diego Museum of Art.

In July, we will break ground for the construction of the Conrad Prebys Theatre Center, featuring a state-of-the-art arena stage, education center and plaza. The Old Globe is proud to recognize the generous donors who have helped us reach this momentous point in the Globe’s history. The Capital Campaign, launched in 2006 with the announcement of the lead gift from Donald and Darlene Shiley, has now raised over 75% of its goal. As the hammers ring out this summer, we need crucial support to complete the Campaign and secure the future of The Old Globe for the 21st century.

You can play an important role in helping us reach this goal — and record your support of The Old Globe in lasting fashion. We are offering donors the opportunity to underwrite a limited number of personalized granite pavers, to be installed in the newly-redesigned Copley Plaza in front of the Globe’s three theatres. The pavers will be the focal point of the plaza’s graceful circular design, to be enjoyed by millions of Globe patrons and Balboa Park visitors for decades to come.

Your contribution to the paver campaign will also help us meet a very important challenge. The Globe has been awarded a $1 million Challenge Grant by the nationally-renowned Kresge Foundation. To qualify for this grant, the Globe must raise $9 million in new or increased gifts. Your purchase of a paver will help us reach this goal, win the grant — and complete our Capital Campaign. Your help is critical to this effort! To learn more about how you can participate, please call the Globe’s Development Office at (619) 231-1941 x2317.

Thank you for choosing to be with us in 2008. We’ll be breaking ground — theatrically and literally! — this summer. We hope you will be back often to share in the excitement!
The Old Globe is deeply grateful to its Season Sponsors, each of whom has made an annual donation of $50,000 or greater. These gifts are critical to maintaining the Theatre’s high quality of artistic programming and award-winning work in the community.

Bridge to Broadway is a special fundraising program to launch Globe productions bound for the Great White Way. To date, 20 Globe plays and musicals have gone on to Broadway, including the current production of A Catered Affair, which was nominated for twelve Drama Desk Awards and three Tony Awards.

Participants in Bridge to Broadway enjoyed a private dinner in one of New York’s finest restaurants and attended the opening night performance and cast party of A Catered Affair. Those who purchased the package during the Live Auction at the Globe Gala also were able to fly to New York and back by private jet, which was very generously donated by Sheryl and Harvey White.

For more information or to participate in the next Bridge to Broadway excursion, please contact Director of Development Todd Schultz at (619) 231-1941 x2310.

SILVERJET Provides Airfare for Globe Gala

The Old Globe is pleased to recognize Silverjet as a new Globe Production Sponsor. This British airline offers low-fare business class seats with flights between London - New York and London - Dubai. Silverjet provides travelers with the use of private terminals and personalized services, both on the ground and in luxurious cabins on the plane.

At previous Globe Galas, live auction packages included travel to London with accommodations at Waddesdon Manor, the Rothschild’s family home, or the Four Seasons London. The winning bidders of these auction packages will travel from New York to London, compliments of Silverjet.

The 2008 Globe Gala will be held on Saturday, September 20.

Dear Friends,

I am pleased to welcome you to this performance. Hershey Felder’s Monsieur Chopin and George Gershwin Alone are a special treat, added to the Globe’s season to offer you an unprecedented opportunity, along with last month’s Beethoven, As I Knew Him, to see all three parts of “The Composer Sonata.” Enjoy the show!

This summer we will begin construction for the Globe’s new facilities, which include a new education center for expanded education and outreach programs, a new arena stage offering enhanced technical capabilities and increased audience comfort, as well as a gorgeous new plaza.

With construction beginning, we are entering the final phase of our Capital and Endowment Campaign. With extremely generous leadership support from Donald and Darlene Shiley, Conrad Prebys, and our Board of Directors, the Campaign has reached 75% of goal. To help the Globe complete the final, most challenging phase of the campaign, the nationally-renowned Kresge Foundation has awarded us a Challenge Grant of $1 million to secure community support.

Elsewhere in this program (see page p12) you can read about a special opportunity to assist the Campaign and leave the imprint of your support for The Old Globe for future generations with the purchase of a personalized granite paver in the central plaza. I invite you to join with the Globe family at this crucial juncture and help us meet the Kresge Challenge.

Monsieur Chopin - A “Romanza” for actor and piano.

Fryderyk Chopin (Zelazowa Wola, Poland 1810 - Paris, France, 1849) is thought of today as the “poet of the piano” whose keyboard compositions are of an unparalleled beauty. He is considered the inventor of the romantic piano sound, as well as the originator of the technical approach to the keyboard still in use today. His unprecedented and exotic use of melody and harmony anticipates impressionism in music – a movement that would only come to fruition almost half a century after his death.

When Fryderyk Chopin first arrived in Paris from his Polish homeland in 1831, his abilities at the keyboard caused a sensation not only among Paris’ high society, but also among his accomplished and celebrated artist peers. However, even though he made Paris his home, he continued to live as a Pole in exile rather than as a Parisian. He surrounded himself with other Polish exiles, and he instilled his Polish soul into every note that he composed. Even throughout his love affair with France’s most famous woman, his longing for the sounds and the rhythms of his homeland was the basis of many of his compositions.

Today, we know Fryderyk Chopin as the most perfect of keyboard composers, but in his day, he actually earned his living as a piano teacher for the very wealthy and cultured elite. He had but a few professional pianists among his students, yet he took his teaching very seriously and his students were expected to be equally serious about their own work.

It is known that on matters of daily life, Chopin did not express his innermost feelings so readily, but his students did report that every now and then during their lessons, Chopin would begin to reveal himself to a degree that no one besides his students would experience. In the end, those who knew Fryderyk Chopin best have said that only his students really experienced the deepest gifts of their master, and that as a teacher, Chopin was the greatest of them all.

*Paris, the 4th of March, 1848
Welcome to your lesson.*
Chopin: A Chronology

March 1, 1810 - Fryderyk Franciszek Chopin born in Zelazowa Wola, west of Warsaw, to Mikolaj and Tekla Justyna.

April 1, 1810 - Mikolaj Chopin is awarded a position at the Warsaw Lyceum, and moves his family to Warsaw. The Chopin family's first apartment is located in the Saxon Palace.

1815-1816 - Music permeates the Chopin household: Mikolaj plays violin and flute, while Mme. Chopin plays the piano and sings. According to Izabela, her brother 'soon began to display a sensitivity to musical impressions by crying.'

1816 - Six-year-old Fryderyk begins regular lessons under Wojciech Zywny, formerly a teacher at the family boarding house. Chopin never has another piano teacher.

March, 1817 - The Chopin family moves, with the Warsaw Lyceum, to the Kazimierz Palace. Chopin's first compositions: polonaises, military marches and variations.

November, 1817 - Polonaise in G Minor is published.

1819 - As a child prodigy, Chopin begins to perform in the homes of nobility and aristocracy.

April 10, 1827 - Chopin's youngest sister, Emilia, dies of consumption. At the Powanzki cemetery, her gravestone reads: 'Perished in the fourteenth spring of her life, like a flower in which blossomed the beautiful promise of fruit.'

April 21, 1829 - At a concert, Chopin meets Konstancja Gladkowska, his 'first love.'

1830 - Chopin is part of active artistic life of Warsaw; composes waltzes, mazurkas, and écossaises.

February 26, 1832 - Chopin's first concert in Paris, in the Salle Pleyel, as one of thirteen performers. The audience includes the musical elite of Paris, including Franz Liszt.

April 13, 1833 - Mikolaj Chopin writes to his son: "... in spite of your talent and the flattery which they lavish on you — it is hot air, they will not help you in times of need. Should, God forbid, some indisposition or illness force you to break off your lessons, you will be threatened with poverty in exile.”

June 20, 1833 - Chopin's friendships, including those with fellow composers, become more intimate. Although he is at times critical of their music, he dedicates some of his own compositions to them ("a mon ami F. Liszt").

Monsieur Chopin, The Polish Virtuoso

By Dr. Jeffrey Kallberg

Throughout the first part of the nineteenth century, and particularly in the years between the revolutions of 1830 and 1848, Paris was a mecca for pianists. They came from all parts of Europe to flaunt their virtuosity and to sell their music. Pianos, pianists and piano music captured the attention of the nineteenth-century Parisian musical public to a degree scarcely imaginable today.

In a concert life so fully freighted with pianists, we might suppose that there would have been little to distinguish Fryderyk Chopin's debut before the Parisian public in 1832 from that of any of the other flock of keyboard artists. In the minds of his contemporaries, however, Chopin stood apart from the crowd in one essential way: he was not only a virtuoso pianist, he was also a Pole. "Concert by Monsieur Chopin, from Warsaw," announced the title of the review of Chopin's first public appearance in Paris, and from this moment, it seemed impossible to imagine Chopin the pianist and composer without also bringing to mind his native origins.

Chopin stood apart from other virtuosos by virtue of his coming from an exotic, distant land. From the start, the Polish element in Chopin's music provoked perceptions of foreignness, of strangeness. Chopin seemed inextricably linked with his native origins; his Polishness constituted one of the primary images through which listeners filtered his music. This primary image implied in turn a close and pervasive relationship between Chopin's entire oeuvre and nineteenth-century Polish history and culture. And that this epoch evokes highly charged memories — erased from the map, existed only in the minds of a disen-franchised citizenry — further solidifies this relationship. To hear Chopin was in some sense to "hear Poland."
Chopin especially encouraged this way of hearing in his mazurkas and polonaises. Both genres traced their dance and vocal origins back to Poland (the mazurka was cultivated primarily in folk and urban dance spheres, the polonaise in more aristocratic circles). One reason Chopin turned so often to these distinctly Polish kinds of music was that they gave him the chance through their familiar rhythmic and formal gestures directly to evoke memories of different aspects and strata of Polish culture.

But listeners in Chopin’s day more generally construed a nationalist element in all of his music. Some of them, especially in Western Europe, perceived a “cultural” nationalism: for them, Chopin’s music evoked images of Polish customs, beliefs, social forms, ethnic groups and language, but did not engage expressly with the political status of the country. On the other hand, Chopin’s Polish audiences were more inclined to hear a “political” nationalism in which the issue of the sovereignty of Poland was understood to lay at the expressive core of the composition.

Chopin himself left only a few vague verbal clues that testify to his understanding of the nationalist element in his music. Yet the very elusiveness of these statements is suggestive. For in light of Chopin’s abiding avoidance of political activism, they imply that he gravitated most comfortably to expressions of cultural nationalism. He might certainly have hoped that listeners at the same time reflect on the Polish political situation (following the Russian defeat of the Poles’ 1830 “November uprising,” the plight of Poland was much discussed throughout Europe during the 1830s and 1840s). Nonetheless Chopin probably did not normally view his music as a tool for political engagement.

— Dr. Jeffrey Kallberg is the Professor of Music History and Chair of the Department of Music at the University of Pennsylvania. He is the author of Chopin at the Boundaries: Sex, History, and Musical Genre (Harvard University Press).

September 9, 1836 - Chopin asks for the hand of 17-year-old Maria Wodzinska, and is accepted, on condition that he takes care of his health. During their secret engagement, Chopin writes what would become the first two Etudes of Op. 25 in his fiancée’s album.

October, 1836 - At a soirée at the residence of Countess Marie d’Agoult, meets 32-year-old George Sand for the first time. Writes: “What an unpleasant woman!”

April 3, 1837 - In a letter to Countess Marie d’Agoult, Sand writes: “Tell Chopin that I idolize him.”

May, 1838 - In a now-famous 32-page letter to Chopin’s close friend Wojciech Grzymala, Sand writes: ‘I ask not if he loves or is loved, if he loves her more or less than me… I want to know which of us he should forget or abandon in order to preserve his peace, his happiness, his life, indeed, which appears to be too frail and faint to be exposed to great suffering.’

June-November 1841 - Spends summer and fall at Sand’s estate in Nohant. Composes seven new opuses (Nos. 43-49).

July 30, 1842 - Spends ten days in Paris with Sand, choosing a new apartment. They decide on a complex of houses; Sand would live at no. 5, Chopin at no. 9.

May 3, 1844 - Mikolaj Chopin dies in Warsaw.

Summer, 1848 - Chopin’s pessimism grows: “I am no longer capable of sadness or joy – I have used up my feelings completely – I only vegetate and wait for it to end more quickly.” And in a letter to Grzymala, he writes “I feel alone, alone, alone, although surrounded by people.”

October 17, 1849 - Shortly after midnight, Fryderyk Chopin dies. His last words were reportedly: “Matka, moja biedna matka” [Mother, my poor mother].

October 30, 1849 - Thousands attend Chopin’s funeral in Church of the Madeleine. Music performed during the services included Preludes in E Minor and B flat, Mozart’s Requiem, and the Funeral March from the B-Flat Minor Sonata. Although Chopin is buried in the Pere-Lachaise cemetery, his heart rests in the Church of the Holy Cross in Warsaw.

The question most often asked by journalists, artists and the public is “What discovery about George Gershwin surprised you most?”

The response that immediately comes to mind is the polarization of opinion about everything Gershwin. He was beloved by the public at large, but he divided the critics in half. His friends and acquaintances said they either loved him deeply, or simply tolerated him. There were those that said he was a womanizer, and others that he had only one mistress — his music.

Musicians and composers either loved his playing and composing — or completely dismissed it. There were friends who said he was a man in love with his art, and others who said he was a man in love with himself. While Rouben Mamoulian, famed director of Porgy and Bess, said that George had a genuine way of observing himself from the outside, Harold Arlen and other friends claimed that George lacked any ability for self-analysis. And although he engaged in sessions with a psychoanalyst over a lengthy period, George himself said that he really had no interest in looking deep inside.

A child of Russian-Jewish immigrants, George Gershwin brought dance music into the concert hall and made a “lady out of jazz.” He composed America’s greatest opera with the Black South as its subject matter, which interestingly enough, led to a number of anti-Semitic attacks. George’s personal letters reveal a very kind-hearted man, but there are a number of accounts to the contrary. There are recordings of George Gershwin’s own playing that are masterful, and others that reveal technical and musical deficiencies.

So given this polarization of thought, what was George Gershwin really like, and why did so many respond to him the way they did? The Music.

Thank you for attending George Gershwin Alone.

— Hershey Felder
OUR CONNECTION TO GEORGE
By Hershey Felder

In 1932, American composer George Gershwin was a guest on the Fleischmann Hour Radio Show, hosted by the classic American crooner, Rudy Vallee. Radio was still quite new, and for the first time in history, people from across the nation were able to tune in and catch a few live magical moments, all at the same time. Some years after George died, his older lyricist brother, Ira, came across a number of long-forgotten acetate discs stored in a family closet. To Ira’s shock, on one of the discs was a complete and clear recording of this very radio show. Immediately after Vallee’s brief introduction, there is a frisson of energy and George’s fingers hit the keys in a rising major chromatic passage that gives birth to a glorious improvisation as good as its name: Fascinating Rhythm. The music and playing is infused with such joy that it is impossible not to want to dive into the recording itself and somehow be a part of a world long gone. There is something in George Gershwin’s music, and even more so when one hears him play it, that brings him, completely and unequivocally, to life. What is even more miraculous is that when one hears this recording, one feels it to be familiar. What is it about George Gershwin and his music that makes us connect with it in such a strong way?

Brooklyn-born in 1898, he had the gift of “hearing music in the heart of noise.” Gershwin grew up to capture American sound in music — “our national pep, our metropolitan madness, our blues.” His formal keyboard lessons began at the age of 10, at which point, he immediately commandeered the family piano away from his older and more bookish brother, Ira. George’s public musical life began when he was 15, pounding out tunes for prospective sheet music publishers and buyers on New York’s famed Tin-Pan Alley. With a natural keyboard ability and a special gift for melody and harmony, George quickly made his way from song-plugger to songwriter and, by the time he was 26 years old, with the 1924 New York premiere of Rhapsody in Blue, to concert hall composer and major international star.

Songwriter Irving Berlin quipped, “George Gershwin is the only songwriter I knew who became a composer.” George himself never cast aside his natural gift for the creation of the great American song. In fact, he was writing songs right up until the very end when he died of a brain tumor in 1937 at age 38. As the last thing that George was working on when he died was a melody left only in sketch form, it was up to his brother Ira, with whom George wrote some of the world’s most enduring love songs, and their friend, musician Vernon Duke, to complete Our Love is Here to Stay. Almost three quarters of a century later, there is no doubt that Ira’s great romantic lyric also describes the enduring quality of his and his brother’s love — their work. George and Ira’s most beloved songs have made their way into the public consciousness not just because of their inventive and haunting sounds, but also because of the humanity of Ira’s words. However, the most famous Gershwin work of all is the wordless Rhapsody in Blue. How is it that a concerto-like collection of loosely strung together themes and variations from a young composer without much of a structural master plan is as beloved 80 years after its debut as on the day its first note was born? Why do we connect to this piece in the way we do?...

...Although throughout the years “serious” musicologists have complained about the structure of the Rhapsody, one only has to look at the first few pages to see George’s genius upon which he builds the entire piece. Two simple themes are turned inside out and sideways in at least three keys with nary a sign of boredom. Then, just when things couldn’t get more joyful, George introduces another seemingly unrelated theme in G major. Had he run out of ideas? Of course not!

This theme answers the one that directly precedes it. His themes are talking to one another. A second American has entered the scene — and he, too, has something to say to that which came before him! The new melody is turned in every which way and in more than one key, and pulls George Gershwin plays piano at the RKO convention in June 1937 taken by an unknown photographer this is the last photograph taken of the composer.

It has been said by those in the know, that the Rhapsody's Finale doesn't broaden enough to allow us the full effect of a climax — that it sneaks up on us, and robs us of the time to feel satisfied. Naturally! With such vision as George Gershwin had, such a gift — and still, so much more to say — how could George have given it a solid, full-blown and final end? America was just begin-ning, as was its greatest composer, and the energetic and punchy finale is about the excitement of all which still lies ahead.

That George Gershwin didn't live to see the opening night of Oklahoma or West Side Story, My Fair Lady or Fiddler on the Roof or even meet Obi-Wan, John Williams and Star Wars, is a tragedy. By right, a father should be present at the successes of his young sons. But even though he died when just a young man himself, 67 years after he is gone, we still connect to his music as if it were just composed today, and composed especially for us — because what George Gershwin created was more than just the foundation of a musical and cultural country. He left us with the musical reflection of who we are.

— Hershey Felder, February, 2004

His critical edition of Luisa Miller, for The Works of Giuseppe Verdi, has been performed throughout the U.S. and internationally. His current projects include a book on Chopin and the culture of the nocturne, an examination of the convergences of sex and music around 1800, and a study of Scandinavian song in the first half of the twentieth century. Kallberg was elected Vice President of the American Musicological Society for the term 2004-2006. He served as Review Editor of the Journal of American Musicological Society and is presently general editor of New Perspectives in Music History and Criticism (Cambridge University Press). He has won numerous awards for publications, and received fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation. He has also twice been guest-of-honor at the International Fryderyk Chopin Competition in Warsaw, Poland. In 2005, the Palmer
Theological Seminary called upon Kallberg to identify and authenticate an autographed manuscript of Beethoven’s Grosse Fuge that was discovered in their library. The manuscript, one of the last that Beethoven completed, preserves fascinating evidence of his compositional thinking; its reappearance after some 115 years caused considerable excitement across the musical world. In December 2005, the manuscript sold at auction for nearly $1.9 million.

When not keeping busy with the day-to-day operations of 88LLC, she enjoys cooking, travel, and theatre. There was a time she took great pleasure in playing the piano; however, she has given it up as comparisons to Hershey’s playing are simply too painful. With special thanks to Mr. Felder, the GGA-MC LA, James, and The Family.

An important thank you to Lee and Claire Kaufman and their family who, besides having driven, flown and even walked through the most dreadful weather to support our performances (it all started way back when with a terrible storm in Philadelphia that had Lee wandering off the street into a performance of George Gershwin Alone…), the Kaufman family have been production supporters since the very beginning. I can only express how lucky and grateful I am, not only for their support, but for their friendship.

I would also like to thank Lee’s family who, besides having driven, flown and even walked through the most dreadful weather to support our performances (it all started way back when with a terrible storm in Philadelphia that had Lee wandering off the street into a performance of George Gershwin Alone…), the Kaufman family have been production supporters since the very beginning. I can only express how lucky and grateful I am, not only for their support, but for their friendship.

A particular and heartfelt thank you to my team of devoted artisans, many of whom have been with me through dozens of productions all over the world - Matt Marden, GiGi Garcia, Rich Norwood, Tamora Wilson, Francois-Pierre Couture, Nettie Wasowski, Andrew Wilder, Yael Pardess, Michael Gilliam, Goy Casper, John Boesche, Erik Cartensen, Christopher Ash – without whom none of our work would be possible; and The Entire Staff of the Old Globe Theatre.

A special thank you to Candice and Joel Zwick, Joel Zwick “Alone” – Joel, without whom there would be nothing but wandering art. Joel Zwick has always referred to himself as a “funny little man.” Indeed, that he is… but he is also, and more so, a great artist, an endless thinker, and a director’s director whose goal is not to impose his own “lofty ideas” on a work of art, but to rid the work of all forms of pretense so that the expression breathes as it must – naturally, honestly, and as it is.

A very special and personal Thank You to my Greek family, Samantha, Mom, Dad, and Chris Voxakis. As you have often implied, “When my people were writing philosophy,your people were still swinging from trees.” (Gus, MBFGW) Without you, Eighty-Eight Entertainment would not exist. And many thanks to the rest of the auxiliary - Rosalinda, Sandy, and Cheryl - for their support over the years and across the miles.

My father and stepmother, Jack and Lea, my sister and brother-in-law, Tammy and Kevin and their dear child Avery, with the next one on the way in good time...

And of course, to those who are everything -...Chance and KIM (XXOO).
THE OLD GLOBE SUMMER SHAKESPEARE INTENSIVE:
Immersing Students in the Bard’s Work

Summer at The Old Globe is synonymous with Shakespeare. The San Diego community has embraced this annual feast for the Shakespeare-starved for many years. In addition to our local fans of the Bard, last year’s Summer Shakespeare Festival was enjoyed by people from 47 states and 14 countries around the world.

The Old Globe knows classical theatre and it is part of our mission to provide “an environment for the growth and education of theatre professionals, audiences and the community at large.” This summer we continue building that environment for growth with an amazing Summer Shakespeare Intensive for high school students. This four week classical theatre training program will serve up to 40 students who auditioned in early March.

During this summer’s Intensive, a core faculty of our Master of Fine Arts students will put those teens through some of the same challenging lessons they have learned in their graduate studies here. They study movement, learning to express emotions and meaning through their bodies. They practice stage combat, learning how to make theatrical fisticuffs look real for an audience without injuring themselves in the process. They study Shakespeare’s text to fathom the meaning of the words, the mysteries of the punctuation, and the rhythms of the speeches. They focus on speech, learning how to speak clearly and distinctly and to project their voices for audiences in our own Lowell Davies Festival theatre. This project provides an amazing opportunity for serious students to really explore the craft of acting with talented and well-trained mentors and to prepare themselves for the college or professional theatre world.

The Intensive is unique in that it explores Shakespeare’s work in English and in Spanish! Two years ago, the theatre presented a bi-lingual production, Romeo y Julieta, performed by high school students from schools in San Diego and Tijuana and presented in both cities. The project was exciting and challenging and provided an opportunity for students to build friendships and language skills.

This year, we are using a beautiful translation of Romeo and Juliet by Pablo Neruda, Chile’s great poet, which was performed by The Public Theater in New York in 1965. It is rare to find a quality verse translation, but Neruda created a work of art that reflects Shakespeare’s language, imagery and rhythm. This summer’s Intensive combines Shakespeare’s original text with Neruda’s translation to create a version that tells the story in both languages.

San Diego is a diverse community and many of our neighbors speak English and Spanish. The combination of languages and cultures is a part of what makes this city so beguiling. The Old Globe Summer Shakespeare Intensive embraces the community’s rich languages and cultures and explores them through classic theatre. It is an honor and pleasure to work with these talented young actors and to further their training with this empowering program.

The Old Globe shows its commitment to these students in a particularly remarkable way. In recognition of the fact that talented people come from all walks of life and that all students willing to devote themselves to a challenging artistic endeavor deserve the opportunity to do so, our generous donors have made it possible for all students participating in this program to receive a full scholarship. This kind of farsighted commitment makes our donors stand out as supporters not just of the Globe but of the very future of theatre in San Diego and the nation. Their support of the Intensive is exemplary and we are grateful to each and every one of them.

The students will take to the Lowell Davies Festival stage on Monday, August 11 at 8:00 p.m. Please join us as we showcase their work.

(619) 23-GLOBE I www.TheOldGlobe.org
The house lights dim. Before the curtain rises or the stage is lit, music swells and you hear distant sounds of the sea. Sound is the first element of most performances, and before anything else happens, a mood is set, a location is indicated, and you begin to enter the world of the play.

Everything you hear on stage — sometimes including the actors’ voices — is brought to you by the Sound Department through its two related functions, sound design and sound engineering.

The Sound Designer creates a “soundscape” for a production, a score of music and sound effects that make up the aural environment of the play. This process starts before rehearsals even begin, with the director and sound designer consulting to determine the atmosphere, setting, and actions that must be created and supported by the sound score. Then the designer draws upon a vast library to produce the needed sound. Music may be recorded or live, a well-known piece or something composed especially for the production. For all the other sounds, The Old Globe’s library includes 200,000 individual sound effects.

But sometimes the perfect sound hasn’t yet been recorded and then the sound designer must find or create it. For example, for the 2006 production of Pig Farm, sound designer Paul Peterson spent three days at a large commercial pig farm, recording the sounds of hundreds of pigs eating, fighting, and “romancing.” Then he visited trained show pigs at the Del Mar Fairgrounds, to capture specific vocalizations — an entire pig vocabulary of snorts and squeals. So even though not a single pig appears on stage, the play’s sound evokes the farm setting, with a vivid sense that, just out of sight, the place is teeming with hogs, sows, and piglets.

Each night in the theatre, those sounds are triggered by the Sound Engineer, who operates a mixing console connected to a network of sound equipment. Selecting the best equipment for the desired sound quality is another crucial element of sound design. If there is live music, each instrument may need a different kind of microphone to best capture its unique sound. If the actors’ voices will be amplified, the sound designer must work with the costume designer to fit wireless transmitters into costumes (women often wear them in their wigs!). The microphone elements are then hidden in the actors’ hairline or over the ear. The right speakers for broadcasting the types of sound needed must be chosen and located on stage and in the theatre. In Dancing in the Dark, for example, there were 53 separate speakers, many of them concealed in elements of the set. Controlling the quality and volume of sound that goes into the mixing console and out of each of those speakers to achieve the perfect mix of sound in the theatre is the domain of the Sound Engineer. During technical rehearsals, the Engineer works side-by-side with the Designer to create the desired mix, which is then replicated in each performance thereafter.

To coordinate the sound with the action on stage during every performance, the Stage Manager, watching the stage from a booth in the back of the theatre, cues the sound engineer (as well as lights and other stage effects). A play typically averages around 100 individual sound cues; Pig Farm had approximately 600, an average of one every 10 seconds or so! Fortunately, many of these may be combined into automated sequences with digital equipment, allowing the sound engineer to set off a chain of sound effects and volume fades with one motion. A single word in a stage direction, for example, “storm,” may actually be as many as 15 individual sounds, blending together different levels of thunder, rain, and wind to create the particular storm the audience experiences.

In Shakespeare’s day, people going to the theatre said they were going “to hear a play.” Our more visual culture may say we “see” a play, but what we hear has a powerful impact on how we experience it. And, no less than those elements we do see, such as sets and costumes, the sounds we absorb while engrossed in a performance are designed, created, and produced by talented and skilled artists and technicians, essential members of The Old Globe’s creative team.
The Old Globe’s ability to maintain the highest standard of excellence, while keeping ticket prices affordable, is due in large part to the financial support of more than 3,500 individuals, businesses, foundations and government agencies. Please join us in giving a warm thanks and recognition to these leaders who have made tonight and our 625 other performances possible. The Old Globe appreciates the support of those who have stepped into the spotlight.

LOUIS G. SPISTO
CEO/Executive Producer
Louis G. Spisto has led The Old Globe since October, 2002. During his tenure, Spisto spearheaded the return of the Shakespeare Repertory Season and brought to the Globe several new musicals, including the critically-acclaimed A Catered Affair, the launch of the national tour of the Tony Award-winning Avenue Q and the Broadway transfers of Chita Rivera: The Dancer’s Life, and the Twyla Hart/Bob Dylan musical, THE TIMES THEY ARE A-CHANGIN’. He has produced over 75 plays and musicals, including Dirty Rotten Scoundrels, the west coast premiere of the Tony-winning play Take Me Out and the annual holiday favorite, Dr. Seuss’ How the Grinch Stole Christmas!. Spisto has managed the Globe’s Capital Campaign to raise $75 million by the Theatre’s 75th anniversary in 2010. Launched in March 2006, the campaign has reached 75% of its goal to date. During the past four seasons, the Globe has grown its subscription audience an unprecedented amount, resulting in the highest level of attendance in over a decade. The Globe was also recognized by Charity Navigator, America’s premiere charity evaluator, which recently gave the Globe its third consecutive 4-Star rating. A strong advocate of arts education, Spisto initiated several new programs involving students from both San Diego and Tijuana in a unique bilingual production of Romeo and Juliet. He also launched a free matinee series which brings thousands of students to the Globe’s productions. Spisto established a reputation as a superb arts executive here in California, where he spent over ten years as the Executive Director of the Pacific Symphony Orchestra in Orange County. During his tenure there, he tripled the orchestra’s annual budget, while eliminating a prior deficit and successfully completing the orchestra’s first endowment campaign. In addition, he established a series of innovative recording projects with Sony Classical and oversaw a number of nationally recognized commissioning projects. He also served as the chief executive at both American Ballet Theatre and The Detroit Symphony. He holds a Masters degree from the University of Wisconsin in Arts Administration and a Bachelors of Business Administration from the University of Notre Dame, and spent many years directing, producing and as an actor in plays and musicals throughout his college and graduate school years, as well as in professional summer theatre.
