Dear Friends,

Welcome to Sight Unseen, the inaugural production at The Old Globe’s arena stage at the James S. Copley Auditorium. We are deeply grateful that our neighbor, the San Diego Museum of Art, has leased us this space while we construct our new second stage. This allows us to continue our program without interruption in a perfect venue, thanks to this special arrangement with the Museum. As for the venue—we have made it a priority to create a theatrical space here that retains all the intimacy that our audiences have treasured in the former Cassius Carter Centre Stage. So again, we thank the San Diego Museum of Art for making it possible for the Globe to bring you an exciting season of theatre.

As you can see, we’ve begun construction of the Globe’s new campus, including the new arena theatre, education center, and plaza. We’ve even built a temporary pub across the plaza. Our plans for the upcoming seasons and the education programs in the new center are well underway, and we thank you for being a part of the excitement during the construction period.

As part of the Summer Season, on the Old Globe stage, Resident Artistic Director Darko Tresnjak brings you the delightful comedy, The Pleasure of His Company. And, of course, it can’t be summer without the Globe’s nationally-recognized Shakespeare Festival in the Lowell Davies Festival Theatre. Romeo and Juliet, The Merry Wives of Windsor, and All’s Well That Ends Well run in repertory with a wonderful company of actors, playing through the end of September.

While all of this takes place, our innovative Summer Shakespeare Intensive is giving young people an extraordinary opportunity to explore Shakespeare. We’ve brought students from around the county to work with our Old Globe/USD Master of Fine Arts students, as they prepare and perform a special adaptation of Romeo and Juliet. Their training and rehearsal will be documented in a blog on our website, and they take to the Festival Theatre stage on August 11. Join us in following their progress and enjoying their performance.

More than anything, we’re so pleased that you are here in this exciting new space—for this exciting performance of Sight Unseen. Enjoy your experience.
The Old Globe is deeply grateful to its Season Sponsors, each of whom has made an annual donation of $50,000 or greater. These gifts are critical to maintaining the Theatre’s high quality of artistic programming and award-winning work in the community.

Dear Friends,

Welcome to the 2008 Summer Season! Construction has begun on our exciting new facility, the Conrad Prebys Theatre Center, which includes the Sheryl and Harvey White Theatre, a 250-seat arena stage, and the Karen and Donald Cohn Education Center, featuring Hattox Hall. Scheduled for completion in late 2009, these facilities are made possible by our capital campaign, Securing A San Diego Landmark, led by magnificent gifts from Donald and Darlene Shiley, Conrad Prebys and our Board of Directors. We are very grateful to them and the many other community-spirited supporters of the Globe who have contributed to the campaign.

With construction of our new facilities underway, the Securing a San Diego Landmark campaign has reached 75% of its goal. As you consider helping us with the critical last phase of the campaign, you'll be pleased to know that the foremost evaluator of non-profit organizations, Charity Navigator, ranks the Globe in the top 6% of all non-profits nationwide based on our record of "exceptional" financial stability and the resources we devote to our artistic and education programs. When you give to The Old Globe, you can be confident that your gift is being used well.

Thank you for your support of The Old Globe. Enjoy the show!

“"The work on the stages of The Old Globe speaks for itself,” in the view of Donald Cohn, longtime Board member and Globe supporter. Karen and Donald Cohn have been involved at the Globe for decades. Both have served as Chair of the Board of Directors, a position Donald now holds. Karen was founding chair of the Globe Gala, has since chaired a series of very successful Galas, and has been a leader in many other Globe activities.

The Globe is a family tradition for the Cohns. Karen, a native San Diegan, began attending the Globe’s Shakespeare Festival as a teenager and has passed the tradition on to their son Jonathan, who also worked as an intern at the Globe and is now in film school. “When I met Don, one of our first dates was at the Globe, to see a production of Julius Caesar with [Associate Artist] Jonathan McMurtry in the cast,” says Karen.

Karen was a founding member of the City of San Diego Commission for Arts and Culture. “In that role, I reviewed proposals from all the arts organizations and the Globe’s was always among the strongest and most impressive. When my term on the Commission ended, I knew I wanted to become more involved at the Globe.”

“The Globe has changed a lot in the sixteen years since I first joined the Board. I loved working with [Artistic Director Emeritus] Jack O’Brien and [former Managing Director] Tom Hall. And now [current CEO/Executive Producer] Lou Spisto has been spectacular on so many different levels. The Globe has grown tremendously; he has increased our presence on Broadway and done so much to build the organization. I feel like we’ve been through the birthing pains of the organization and want to stay involved to see what happens next. It’s a kind of family feeling, the pride we have in the Globe.”

The Cohns fit their commitment to the Globe into very busy lives. Donald was Founder and CEO of DataQuick, the nation’s leading real estate information company, which he led for eighteen years. He now works in start-up investment in the tech world and continues his 40-year career in real estate development. Karen is a former attorney. They also own Ballena Vista Farms, one of the largest thoroughbred breeding facilities in California, and are very involved in thoroughbred racing.

But the arts hold a special place in their lives. “I see theatre as a ‘higher calling,’ if I can use that term,” says Karen. “When you see something on stage, it resonates more deeply. The juxtaposition of art, words, thought and performance gets into your soul. Moral, philosophical, and aesthetic ideas are expressed so much more effectively through theatre than any other art form. There’s nothing like the immediacy and reality of theatre.”

Karen and Donald Cohn believe that “everyone needs to see theatre.” And through their generous support of The Old Globe, they do all they can to make that possible.

DONALD MARGULIES, OR WHAT'S AN AMERICAN PLAYWRIGHT?
By Michael Feingold

The following is an excerpt from Michael Feingold’s introduction to SIGHT UNSEEN and Other Plays by Donald Margulies, Theatre Communications Group Inc., New York, 1995.

When I see one of Donald Margulies’s plays, I always end up thinking about my cousin Abe. He and his wife were among the lucky ones. They had been in Theresienstadt, which was not one of the worst camps, and had actually married in the camp itself. They had survived to settle [in the U.S.] after the War. However, in the late ‘60s, he and his family emigrated to Israel, because he said, “It is going to happen again. It is going to happen here. And I want to be with my own people when the time comes.”

Back then I thought Abe was funny, a bit cracked. We all did. Nowadays I’m not so sure: Israel, where Abe’s family still lives, is slowly struggling toward peace with the Palestinians. Meanwhile, I sit here in New York, flanked by Louis Farrakhan on one side and Pat Robertson on the other. Maybe it is going to happen here, but I was not born in Europe, and don’t find it so easy to say who my own people are.

Jews are used to being hated; once you have met the hatred, you never get over it. Your consciousness is always marked by a sense of being in some way separate. And your history — like the Holocaust history that sneaks or strides into all of Donald Margulies’s plays — hangs over you, a permanent cloud in even the sunniest sky. There is no escape; what you believe to be permanent and comforting can be taken from you in a second, can vanish without a word.

And this, too, hangs over Margulies, who very properly uses his plays to test the validity of such concepts, sorting out what it means to be creative along with what it means to be a Jew. Margulies’s gift for raising troublesome issues subtly comes with a concomitant gift for ironizing his way around them, for seeing them from all sides. Because troublesome questions don’t have simple answers; that’s why, like history, they never go away. For Margulies, the troublesome questions are about family ethics, friendship and money, and in Sight Unseen, they’re about love and art. But the underlying question that is more... deeply troublesome is about Jews and identity in America, and the real beauty of Margulies’s work is that he’s managed to create an ethnic theatre without the tub-thumping self-consciousness that often mars ethnic-minority art. In art the things you assert are your identity; the questions you raise are your way of transcending it.

Pretending that you have no ethnic identity is no use for purposes of transcendence. Death of a Salesman is a Jewish play too, for all of the little impulses on Arthur Miller’s part to make it more universal by making it abstract. What Miller wrote, in effect, was the story of the Jewish spirit’s failure to find a home in the American system; everything Margulies writes, one step further on, is an implied critique of the system on that basis, the chronicle of a land which is all model apartments and no home for anybody’s spirit. Eugene O’Neill’s Long Day’s Journey into Night – an Irish Catholic play the way Death of a Salesman is a Jewish play – also seeps into Margulies’s work. The cruel banality of American life, with which both Miller and O’Neill are at war, is a kind of terrifying wonder-world to Margulies.

Miller and O’Neill’s obsessive focus on the family represents one American approach to art; the other is that consolation of displaced souls, the desire to include everything: Walt Whitman, Gertrude Stein, Thomas Pynchon. Margulies, coming after so many such efforts and sensitively aware of them, seems to be struggling to strike a balance between the two modes. The American everything is in his plays: street slang and Greek myth; the form of naturalism and a determined stylistic disruption of it; the assertion of ethnic identity and a systematic effort to see around it.

So Donald Margulies’s plays remind me of all the reasons why I am not, despite the premonitions of my cousin Abe, going to leave America. I am going to stay here “because I was born here, and my great-great-grandmother baked bread for George Washington’s troops when he crossed the Delaware, and I am going to stay here and have a piece of it just like you.” The part about my great-great-grandmother isn’t true. I didn’t say those words; Paul Robeson did, to a session of the House Un-American Activities Committee, which was trying to deprive him of his passport because of his political beliefs. And when they asked him why he liked Russia so much, he said, among other things, “the great poet of Russia is a Negro,” which is true; he was speaking of Pushkin. Well, the great playwrights of America are African and Latin American and Irish and Italian and Chinese and Eastern European. And Jewish. And when I see Donald Margulies’s plays, I see America. And I like America. And I fear for America. And I smile at America. And I decide not to emigrate.

Michael Feingold has worked in the American theatre for over three decades as a translator, playwright, lyricist, director, dramaturg, and literary manager. He was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize in Criticism for his work as the chief theatre critic for New York’s weekly newspaper, The Village Voice.

“A young painter who cannot liberate himself from the influence of past generations is digging his own grave.”

— Henri Matisse

“Freedom of any kind is the worst for creativity.”

— Salvador Dali

“If a symbol should be discovered in a painting of mine, it was not my intention. It is a result I did not seek. It is something that may be found afterwards, and which can be interpreted according to taste.”

— Marc Chagall

“Which painting in the National Gallery would I save if there was a fire? The one closest to the door, of course.”

— George Bernard Shaw

...AFTERWORD
By Donald Margulies

The following is an excerpt from Donald Margulies’s essay entitled ‘Afterword by the Playwright,” The New York Times, 1992.

Sometime in the early ‘60s, when I was around nine years old, my mother and father and brother and I checked into a cheap hotel in the West 50s of Manhattan, and for six days we saw every hit on Broadway. As the house lights dimmed each night and each matinee, I remember feeling almost unbearably excited by what lay ahead.

Herb Gardner’s A Thousand Clowns was the first nonmusical play I ever saw, and I remember how the muscles in my face hurt from grinning in pleasure for two hours. For a boy like me, whose father worked all the time, it must have been invigorating to see a play about a man who preferred being home to toiling at a demoralizing job. In retrospect, it seems fitting that my first exposure to drama was a play about a complex father figure and his surrogate son, for the theme of fathers and sons has long figured in my plays and in my life.

My father was a taciturn man, physically affectionate but prone to mysterious silences, who worked six, sometimes seven, days a week selling wallpaper in Brooklyn. His days routinely began at six in the morning and didn’t end until eleven at night, but his rare days off were often devoted to playing records on the living room hi-fi. The great composers whose music wafted through our tiny apartment weren’t Beethoven and Mozart but Loesser and Styne and Rodgers and Hammerstein. That was my father at his most content: playing his Broadway musical cast albums, dozens of them, on Sunday mornings throughout my childhood.

My father’s silence created in me a hunger for words that drew me to surrogate fathers, men I knew only through what they wrote. Herb Gardner may have been my earliest spiritual father, but Arthur Miller came into my life not long after. Death of a Salesman’s uncanny reflection of my life and worst fears also exhilarated me and made me feel less alone. I studied it with great fascination, as if it were a key to understanding what was happening to the people I loved, so that I might somehow alter my family’s fate.

After Miller, and as adolescence approached, I discovered in J.D. Salinger a spiritual father so empathic that he seemed to know how I felt about everything. Once I’d read The Catcher in the Rye, I devoured everything he had published — all three slim paperbacks. I wanted more, but Salinger proved to be the ultimate withholding father.

Philip Roth was not withholding. He was brainy, naughty and bursting with words: the cool daddy with whom one could talk about sex. I was fifteen when I first read Portnoy’s Complaint and for all the wrong reasons; I was scanning for tales of sexy shiksas, but what I found were stunning insights into what it meant to be a Jew and a man.

While I was at the State University of New York at Purchase I discovered The Homecoming and The Sound and the Fury. On the face of it, Pinter’s stark, nightmarish black comedy and Faulkner’s gorgeously poetic family saga had little in common and yet, in my mind, they coexisted, thrillingly. If I was to be a writer, why couldn’t I be an offspring of all these spiritual fathers, a son of Pinter and Faulkner — and Miller and Salinger and Roth?

Not until I was an adult did I understand that, in his lonely abdication, my father sought refuge from his demons, from the terrible fear that, not having had a relationship with his own father, he wouldn’t know how to be a father himself; rather than try and fail, he simply retreated into silence. Years after I became a playwright, I realized that playwriting — the craft of dramatizing the unspoken — provided me with the tools I needed to get inside my father’s head and figure out what he was thinking. Through the echoes of my father that occur in my plays, I have been able to give him a voice he only rarely used in life.

FROM AUDITORIUM TO ARENA STAGE
Building an Interim Theatre Space

A new electrical system was installed to support theatrical lighting. A truss grid (a lighting grid supported by a kind of canopy on legs) was built around the theatre to support lighting equipment. The entire lighting system from the former Cassius Carter Centre Stage theatre was moved into the new space.

To fit the new theatre into the space, some changes from the layout of the Carter were necessary. Instead of entering from the top of the theatre, patrons now enter at floor level. ADA-compliant seating for wheelchairs and patrons with limited mobility is also located at floor level. Seats are conference-style chairs, with wider seats than many of the seats in the Carter for increased comfort.

In building this space, we had one goal: to provide you with uninterrupted enjoyment of our intimate productions. We are so pleased to be able to do so in a familiar, convenient location here in Balboa Park.

During construction of the new Conrad Prebys Theatre Center, The Old Globe has built a temporary arena stage in the James S. Copley Auditorium at the San Diego Museum of Art. We are very grateful to the Museum for making it possible to temporarily house our arena stage productions just steps away from the Globe.

Working with the Krenek Design Group, Globe staff developed a design for the new theatre retaining the intimacy you have always enjoyed for our arena stage productions. Anchored into the floor of the auditorium (which will be fully restored when we move out), a “black box” structure was erected, with seating surrounding the stage. One side of the seating goes up onto the old auditorium stage. The remainder of the existing stage is being used for dressing rooms.

We’re sure you will enjoy your experience at The Old Globe Arena Stage at the San Diego Museum of Art’s James S. Copley Auditorium (quite a mouthful — for short, we’re calling it “the Copley”).

And we’re just as sure you will be thrilled with the new Sheryl and Harvey White Theatre, scheduled to open in early 2010. Like the Carter and the Copley, the White Theatre will be an arena stage retaining all the best aspects of its predecessors, but with new state-of-the-art technical resources and increased audience comfort you’ll be sure to appreciate.

No, those are not the titles of The Old Globe’s next season of plays. Those titles were on the program for the Globe Readers Sampler, the culminating activity for The Old Globe’s Literacy Initiative. Children from some of the more than 30 participating schools gathered to hear their own stories read aloud and to perform the plays they had created from those tales.

Over 1,900 children participated in the Globe Readers program during the 2007-08 school year, hearing stories read aloud by our dedicated volunteers, and writing their own stories.

One of the challenges of the program is making sure that the child’s voice is allowed to come through in the written work. The Globe Education staff and our volunteers avoid making changes to the stories. Rather, we allow the idiosyncracies of youthful writing and language to remain in the work which makes presentations of the stories sometimes amusing and sometimes surprising.

With their stories the children open their minds to us and we get a unique opportunity to peek inside. What does a child’s sense of humor sound like? What fears do children have? What do they wonder about? What do they love?

Here are some lines from numerous stories each on a theme of “I love…”

- The sun… it looks like stained glass.
- Hot jalapenos – so spicy they clean your nose.
- When I hear my cat’s meow! It is as wonderful as my favorite kind of music!
- The smell of fresh nachos. It smells so good I could just melt into it like ice cream in the warm summer sun.
- When I give my rabbits carrots – they go crunch, crunch, crunch.
- My baby brother laughing. It sounds like heaven calling out to me.
- The sight of my catfish, Remy. He has a short batch of whiskers that makes him look ancient.
- The sound of a hamster speaking “squeak.” However, you can’t understand it. It’s like a person mumbling.
- I love the view of my mind.
- I love my stuffed animals. Having them touch me makes me feel secure at night. They keep the bad dreams away.
- I love the sound of rain drops. It calms me down.
- I love kind words.

From the sublime to the ridiculous, the stories run the gamut of topics:

“Adriana said, ‘Somebody has stinky feet.’
Angel said, ‘I am the one who has stinky feet. Leona is not the one that has stinky feet. I am!’
Leona blushed as red as a tomato. She was very embarrassed to hear her name and stinky feet in the same sentence. She always thought her feet smelled as fresh as daisies.”

And sometimes they reflect the experiences of the children themselves, in this case a refugee from Iraq:

“Sacrificing everything, they made the decision to leave Iraq. They sold everything they owned – things that belonged to grandmothers and great grandmothers...”

The Old Globe gives voice to playwrights with every play we produce. It seems only natural for our Education Department to give voice to the writings of children. The Globe Readers Sampler is a wondrous event full of laughter and whimsy, sadness and mystery, and, most of all, the voices of our precious children.

We are always looking for volunteers to join the program. If you have time to spare in the upcoming school year, please contact us for information on how to become a part of this wonderful education initiative.

The Old Globe’s ability to maintain the highest standard of excellence, while keeping ticket prices affordable, is due in large part to the financial support of more than 3,500 individuals, businesses, foundations and government agencies. Please join us in giving a warm thanks and recognition to these leaders who have made tonight and our 625 other performances possible. The Old Globe appreciates the support of those who have stepped into the spotlight.

LOUIS G. SPISTO
CEO/Executive Producer
Louis G. Spisto has led The Old Globe since October 2002. During his tenure, Spisto spearheaded the return of the Shakespeare Repertory Season and brought to the Globe several new musicals, including the critically-acclaimed A Catered Affair, the launch of the national tour of the Tony Award-winning Avenue Q and the Broadway transfers of Chita Rivera: The Dancer’s Life, and the Twyla Tharp/Bob Dylan musical, THE TIMES THEY ARE A-CHANGIN’. Spisto has produced over 75 plays and musicals, including Dirty Rotten Scoundrels, the west coast premiere of the Tony-winning play Take Me Out and the annual holiday favorite, Dr. Seuss’ How the Grinch Stole Christmas! Spisto has managed the Globe’s Capital Campaign to raise $75 million by the Theatre’s 75th anniversary in 2010. Launched in March 2006, the campaign has reached 75% of its goal to date. During the past four seasons, the Globe has grown its subscription audience an unprecedented amount, resulting in the highest level of attendance in over a decade. The Globe was also recognized by Charity Navigator, America’s premiere charity evaluator, which recently gave the Globe its third consecutive 4-Star rating. A strong advocate of arts education, Spisto initiated several new programs including an innovative cross-border project involving students from both San Diego and Tijuana in a unique bilingual production of Romeo and Juliet. He also launched a free matinee series which brings thousands of students to the Globe’s productions. Spisto established a reputation as a superb arts executive here in California, where he spent over ten years as the Executive Director of the Pacific Symphony Orchestra in Orange County. During his tenure there, he tripled the orchestra’s annual budget, while eliminating a prior deficit and successfully completing the orchestra’s first endowment campaign. In addition, he established a series of innovative recording projects with Sony Classical and oversaw a number of nationally recognized commissioning projects. He also served as the chief executive at both American Ballet Theatre and The Detroit Symphony. He holds a Masters degree from the University of Wisconsin in Arts Administration and a Bachelors of Business Administration from the University of Notre Dame, and spent many years directing, producing and as an actor in plays and musicals throughout his college and graduate school years, as well as in professional summer theatre.
