Welcome

Dear Friends,

On behalf of our Globe staff and artists, I welcome you to Opus.

As a classical musical enthusiast, I was very intrigued by this sophisticated story about the personal dynamics of a world famous fictional string quartet; A classical Behind the Music if you will.

These four musicians are a vivid study in group dynamics and evoke the way people in any field can relate and work together.

Whether it’s a piece of music, a piece of theatre, or the building of a community, we cannot get there alone.

And The Old Globe cannot get there without you. Although The Globe continues to be supported by a loyal core of donors and subscribers, I must tell you that our finances have been stressed, particularly in the area of contributions. Simply put, to keep our level of productions to the standard you expect and maintain our education programs that reach thousands of young people, we need your help.

The phrase “your support is more critical than ever” is often used, but it has never been more true. You can help us in two ways – tell your friends about this production and other upcoming productions and make a gift, or an additional gift, to directly support our season and our work in the schools.

Do what you can and I assure we will do everything we can to keep great theatre alive at the Globe and in this community for this season and for generations to come.

I thank you for being here and, in advance, for your additional support.

Executive Producer
The Old Globe is deeply grateful to its Season Sponsors, each of whom has made an annual donation of $50,000 or greater. These gifts are critical to maintaining the Theatre’s high quality of artistic programming and award-winning work in the community.

Dear Friends,

Now more than ever, the Globe needs your support and attendance, and we are pleased you’ve chosen to join us today. Gifts from people in the community help ensure that the quality of our productions and the level of education programs, which serve more than 50,000 children and adults each year, remains high.

Founded in 1935, The Old Globe has grown to become the sixth largest regional theatre in the United States and a valued treasure of the San Diego community. This prominence in the theatre community – both nationally and locally – is thanks to our many friends and supporters over the years.

For the fourth consecutive year, Charity Navigator, America’s leading non-profit evaluator, has awarded the Globe a perfect four-star rating for fiscal management, a feat accomplished by fewer than six percent of non-profits in the country. With the current difficulties in the economy, we are re-doubling our efforts to ensure that the Globe remains financially stable and artistically strong.

I ask you today to join me in supporting this wonderful institution by contributing to the Annual Fund. Every donation makes a difference, and I know that if each of us does his or her own part, the Globe will continue for another 75 years, serving San Diego and the national theatre community.

Sincerely,

Major funding provided by the City of San Diego Commission for Arts and Culture. The Old Globe is supported in part by grants from Vice Chairwoman Pam Slater-Price, Supervisor Bill Horn and The County of San Diego.

P6 PERFORMANCES MAGAZINE
2009 marks the 20th anniversary of the City of San Diego Commission for Arts and Culture. For two decades, this incredible organization has encouraged and supported the diversity and growth of arts and culture institutions in our community — through advocacy, public policy, education, cultural tourism, programming and financial support.

Specifically, the Commission administers the city’s $8 million arts and culture program, including the design and development of the arts and culture organizational support program, neighborhood arts and festivals programs, public art in public and private development, and technical assistance and services to artists and arts organizations.

The Old Globe is one of nearly 90 organizations receiving critical support through the Commission’s Organizational Support Program. Commissioners and other community volunteers evaluate requests through a rigorous application process, reviewing the quality of each organization’s artistic programming, educational activities, administrative stability, board leadership, and programs for underserved populations.

Funding for arts and culture is derived from the Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT), a hotel tax paid by tourists visiting San Diego. Allocating less than 1% of total TOT proceeds to the Commission for distribution to qualified applicants, the City supports a vibrant arts and culture community that produces an extraordinary breadth of creative work and provides outstanding education programs serving students in every City Council District – while also providing significant economic benefits. The City’s investment in The Old Globe yields an annual economic impact in San Diego that totals more than $27.5 million.

The Old Globe is grateful to the City of San Diego Commission for Arts and Culture for continually advocating on behalf of the arts and culture community. The Commission’s vision for a vibrant and successful San Diego recognizes arts and culture as a major factor in improving the local economy while enhancing the quality of life for both residents and visitors.

Special thanks to the dedicated group of community volunteers who currently serve as Arts Commissioners:

Program Notes

The true mission of the violin is to imitate the accents of the human voice, a noble mission that has earned for the violin the glory of being called the king of instruments.

CHARLES-AUGUSTE DE BÉRIOT (1802 - 70)

It is believed that the violin originated from Italy in the early 1500s. It evolved from the fiddle and rebec, both were bowed string instruments from the medieval period. The violin also emerged from the lira da braccio, a violin-like instrument of the Renaissance period. The viol, which came before the violin, is also closely related. It is Andrea Amati who is the known developer of the violin. Amati apprenticed as a lute maker and in 1525, he became a master instrument maker. The earliest noted violin makers were Gasparo da Salò and Giovanni Maggini, both Italians, but it is during the 17th and early 18th centuries that the art of violin making reached its peak. The Italians Antonio Stradivari and Giuseppe Guarneri as well as the Austrian Jacob Stainer are most noted during this period.

The earliest form of the violin is very different from that of today. The early violins had a neck that was shorter, thicker and less angled. The fingerboard was likewise shorter, the bridge was flatter and the strings were made of gut. At first the violin wasn’t popular, in fact, it was considered a musical instrument of low status. But by the 1800s such well-known composers as Claudio Monteverdi used the violin in his operas, thus the violin’s status grew. The violin’s prestige continued to rise during the Baroque period, made more notable by such celebrated figures in music as Antonio Vivaldi and Johann Sebastian Bach. By the mid-18th century, the violin enjoyed a vital place in instrumental music ensembles. In the 19th century, the violin’s rise to fame continued in the hands of virtuoso violinists such as Nicolò Paganini and Pablo de Sarasate. In the 20th century the violin reached new heights both in technical and artistic aspects.

The cello is like a beautiful woman who has not grown older but younger with time, more slender, more subtle and more graceful.

PABLO CASALS (1876 - 1973)

Cellos were made as early as the mid-1500’s. The first known maker was Andrea Amati. Only six of his celli are still in known existence today, although the exact locations of only three are known. These 16th century cellos were bigger than today’s cellos, with bodies of 30 or 31 inches. Today, cellos are around 29 inches, and are proportionately smaller. This smaller cello was originally created in the 1690s, but it wasn’t until the early 1700s that most makers began to use this pattern. Many of the earlier cellos by famous makers were later shortened. Antonio Stradivari was initially apprenticed to a cello maker. Though his violins are among the best known and most expensive in the world, he was also a notable cello maker. A Stradivarian cello is worth in the millions today. Even at that time, Italian violinmakers made more money on the cellos.

In the nineteenth century, cellos started to be mass-produced rather than crafted by hand. These instruments were much cheaper and their tone quality was not as good. Cellos are an octave lower than violins (or an octave and a fifth lower than violins). They have a very mellow sound which contributes to the orchestra’s bass line. They do get solos from time to time, though the violins take precedence as far as that's concerned. They are the second best known instrument of the orchestra.
A string quartet can mean any combination of four-stringed instruments. However, traditionally a string quartet is a group of two violins — with the addition of one cello and one viola. Typically, the first violin will play in a higher note range than the melody line, while the second violin will harmonize on the lower notes. If a composer creates music to include stringed instruments, such as bass, other violins, cello or a guitar, the instrumentation indicates this explicitly. It’s easy enough to assemble the forces to perform quartet music: Throw together two violinists, a violist, and a cellist, and put the music in front of them. But it’s a far different thing for those four individuals to become a quartet and attain that indefinable quality of oneness.

Typically, the first violin will play in a higher note range than the melody line, while the second violin will harmonize on the lower notes. If a composer creates music to include stringed instruments, such as bass, other violins, cello or a guitar, the instrumentation indicates this explicitly. It is the exclusive combination of flexibility and fullness that has contributed to the growth in demand for string quartets in recent years. Quartet music incorporates a great range of notes that have more in common with a full orchestra than any other format. At the same time many string quartet arrangements are easy to play and harmonize with. A quartet permits its members to play music independently of each other — but in harmony. Members of a quartet are all soloist musicians in their instrument of choice. This provides an

The viola is an instrument in the violin family. It is slightly larger than the violin with a deeper, mellow tone. It’s tuned a fifth lower (although it is hard to distinguish from a violin when played in an orchestra, unless it’s on the C string). It parallels the human alto voice. Both the violin and the viola evolved directly from the viola da braccio. Since the Italian word violino is a derivative of viola, historians tend to believe that the viola may have actually appeared slightly before the violin. Many violists enjoy believing that they may be at the top of the violin family, at least historically (although nothing has ever been truly proven).

In early orchestra music, the viola’s role was merely harmony. It often had the bass line when the composer couldn’t think of anything else to write. The melody was left to the brighter, higher violin and more powerful, distinct cello. Into the 20th century, the viola began to get a more prominent role, and is now sometimes featured as a solo instrument. Violas were made as early as the 1500s. Gaspara da Salo, who was a prominent cello maker, also was quite famous for his violas and his double basses. In the early classic period (post-Bach), many composers felt the viola was a source of anxiety. The instrument was regarded as clumsy to play, and uncomfortable to write for. The bass line often had awkward harmonies, being written in three different octaves. The eighteen and nineteen hundreds brought better parts for the viola, as composers started to recognize it more as an instrument with different characteristics than the other stringed instruments in the orchestra.

The string quartet is a paramount musical experience, akin to overhearing an impassioned conversation between four strong-willed but loving siblings. Their views are unique, but the intimacy has created a shared sensibility, the power to finish one another’s sentences and complete one another’s thoughts. It’s easy enough to assemble the forces to perform quartet music: Throw together two violinists, a violist, and a cellist, and put the music in front of them. But it’s a far different thing for those four individuals to become a quartet and attain that indefinable quality of oneness.

ALBERT LAVIGNAC (1846 - 1916)
effective way of dealing with complex musical arrangements - since the players don’t need to play in unison or keep in precise timing with the others in the group. Quartet players need only to be concerned with their own parts, and how they merge and harmonize, rather than what the other musicians are playing.

In the mid-18th century, musicians started to use the phrase string quartet. The first musical arrangements for quartets by Joseph Haydn where made up of five movements and resembled the serenade or divertimento. This can be compared to the form of the Opus 9 quartets, written in 1769-70, which are in the accepted standard of Haydn and other composers. These quartets consisted of four movements; a slow movement, fast movement, a trio, minuet - followed by a fast finale. Haydn’s style originated with the Baroque suite and developed gradually since then.

There’s no disputing the fact that Haydn is the father of the string quartet. Haydn played occasionally as a member of quartets at social occasions as well as in an impromptu string quartet that also included the classical master, Mozart. The late eighteenth century set the standard of quality string quartets, as the premier form of chamber music and one which was adopted by virtually all future composers of string quartet music worldwide.

The composition of each of the four stringed instruments is normally in four distinct movements within a larger framework, similar to that found in a symphony. Typically, the outer movements are fast, while the inner movements are slow. Also, don’t forget the dance style movements such as the minuet, furiant or scherzo, which can be in any order. These later movements provide vitality and variety to string quartet arrangements.

Ever since it’s inception, the string quartet holds prestige in being a true test in the art of classical composing. This may be because range and variety of sounds are more limited than with orchestral music. String quartets work with stand-alone music rather than leaning on musical palettes and tonal colors as is frequently the case with orchestrated compositions.

PERFORMANCES MAGAZINE P13
Playwright Michael Hollinger is a classically trained violist who turned to playwriting. With Opus he examines a world he knows well. The history of the renowned Guarneri String Quartet gave him an initial inspiration.

The Guarneri String Quartet, one of the most distinguished names in classical music, will retire this year after 45 years, a remarkable run made even more majestic by the fact that it had just one personnel change in its history. As Steinhardt notes, the three founding members are all in their 70s and playing a string instrument doesn’t get any easier with age. “We started with a one-year plan and we’ve had a one-year plan every year for 45 years. It was time.” In its prime, the Guarneri, which made its formal debut in 1964 just as the Beatles were invading, delivered the standard quartet literature with striking elegance, warmth, technical polish and Old World emotionalism.

The quartet’s stability became a landmark. Its one change came after 37 years, when cellist David Soyer, more than a decade older than the others, retired and was replaced by his former student Peter Wiley. Second violinist John Dalley is the other founding member. Forty-five years is a long time to do anything together, especially play string quartets, which demand such a delicate balance of individuality and teamwork that it’s a wonder anyone can do it at all. “How many relationships do any of us have of any kind that last that long on that level of intensity?” asks Phil Setzer, violinist with the Emerson String Quartet, which counts the Guarneri as an early influence. “It’s not just that they stayed together, but they’ve done so much for chamber music by playing so well and giving it a certain glamour.”

Given today’s verdant chamber music scene, with hundreds of professional string quartets and a top tier of dozens of ensembles that tour widely, it’s difficult to remember how barren the landscape was in the early ‘60s. There were a few full-time quartets associated with universities, but the only American quartets with truly viable commercial profiles were the venerable Budapest (transplanted Europeans on the last leg of their legendary career) and Juilliard, formed in 1946. Europe had the Amadeus quartet and the Quartetto Italiano.

Musicians got together to play quartets privately as they had always done, but the idea of making a living was a non-starter. Yet the four members of the Guarneri — all in their 20s save Soyer, who turned 41 in 1964 — were ambitious, professionally and personally compatible and smitten by the quartet literature, the most rarefied, sublime repertoire in classical music. They were also all hotshots, and a buzz built even before they started performing. Steinhardt says that Alexander Schneider, a violinist in the Budapest and a mentor, told the group, “Don’t play a note. You couldn’t be as good as your reputation.” The timing was ripe. The public and industry were ready for a successor to the Budapest, and the appetite for chamber music exploded in the late ‘60s and ‘70s. The Guarneri’s fast start and natural camaraderie helped it survive the tumultuous early years when many groups die on the vine. The players learned the critical lesson of how to give and take criticism in rehearsal without issues turning personal.

Group decisions about everything from repertoire to concert dress required a unanimous vote; one nay was enough to scuttle any idea. A well-developed sense of humor in all four helped in the long run, and fate played a role too. No major priority shifts or health issues threatened the viability of the group. Dalley was diagnosed with prostate cancer, and while his treatment caused some rescheduling, recital dates were not affected.

RESIDENCY PROJECT’S INAUGURAL YEAR IS A HIT WITH THE NEW MUSICAL KINGDOM

The Globe Technical Center – a scenery building and storage facility in southeastern San Diego at Market and Euclid streets – began operations in early 2008 and became nexus for launching the multi-faceted “Southeastern San Diego Residency Project” to establish the Globe as a vital cultural resource for the community.

The Residency Project’s ground-breaking play development series applies the same level of talent seen during the regular Old Globe season with productions that resonate with younger, more diverse audiences.

The first production in the Residency Project was Kingdom, by Aaron Jafferis and Ian Williams - a new musical that won a 2008 Richard Rodgers Award and the “Most Promising New Musical” award at the 2006 New York Musical Theatre Festival. Kingdom’s original score fuses hip-hop, rock and Latin music to chronicle the lives of two young men caught in the devastating cycle of gang violence.

The southeastern San Diego community played a key role in bringing Kingdom to the stage. Writerz Blok, a non-profit graffiti arts studio, worked with Associate Designer Sean Fanning and other technical staff to create an authentic set. Officers from the San Diego Police Department’s Gang Prevention Unit watched rehearsals of Kingdom, and based on their feedback, a gang sign was changed because it represented a local gang. Additionally, they took the creative team on “ride alongs” through neighborhoods in their precinct to show the realities that some San Diego neighborhoods face. The outpouring of community support helped make Kingdom a great success.

In a first for the Globe, Kingdom was performed both at Lincoln High School Center for the Arts in southeastern San Diego and at The Old Globe Theatre, reaching a total audience of more than 7,536 with a limited-run production of 14 performances. Student matinees on February 12 and 13, 2009 at Lincoln reached 2,139 students – nearly the entire school. Many students returned with friends or family to see public performances of Kingdom at Lincoln, February 14 and 15 and at the Globe, February 19 – 22, 2009.

To help prepare students for seeing Kingdom, Globe teaching artists conducted pre-show workshops in 84 classrooms at Lincoln. Aaron Jafferis worked in residency with students who created their own short theatre piece responding to Kingdom.

The Globe is now working to select material for the 2010 Residency Project through this exciting and innovative new play development process.
The Conrad Prebys Theatre Center will herald an exciting new era for The Old Globe, enabling the theatre to produce works at an even higher artistic level and helping ensure the Globe’s prominent position in the future of American theatre. Construction will be completed in 2009 and the first production will be in early 2010.

Old Globe Theatre - Donald and Darlene Shiley Stage
The Conrad Prebys Theatre Center will encompass both the new facility now under construction and the Old Globe Theatre – the Globe’s flagship theatre with year-round performances of Broadway-bound musicals, classics and new plays.

NEW! Sheryl and Harvey White Theatre
A state-of-the-art arena stage – for our intimate productions – with 251 seats in five rows surrounding the stage, safe and comfortable theatre access for audience and actors, full lighting grid and trap room, and new public restrooms.

NEW! Karen and Donald Cohn Education Center
Including Hattox Hall, a large performance and training space for children and adults, as well as a studio dedicated to student activities and a “History of The Old Globe” installation. The Education Center will be home to the Globe’s many audience enrichment activities, serving more than 50,000 each year, and will feature spectacular views from the Donald and Darlene Shiley Terrace.

NEWLY REDESIGNED! Copley Plaza
The Globe’s 13,000-square foot “outdoor lobby” will feature an expanded dining pavilion and seating areas and stunning new landscaping, providing a comfortable welcome to theatergoers, as well as many of the 12 million annual visitors to Balboa Park.

NOW - NOVEMBER 2009
During construction, The Old Globe has built a temporary arena stage in the James S. Copley Auditorium at the San Diego Museum of Art. We are grateful to the Museum for leasing us this space just steps away from the Globe to house our “second stage” productions. In building this theatre, we had one goal: to provide you with uninterrupted enjoyment of our intimate productions.
The Old Globe's ability to maintain the highest standard of excellence, while keeping ticket prices affordable, is due in large part to the financial support of more than 2,000 individuals, businesses, foundations and government agencies. Please join us in giving a warm thanks and recognition to these leaders who have made tonight and our 625 other performances possible. The Old Globe appreciates the support of those who have stepped into the spotlight.
