August: OSAGE COUNTY
Welcome to THE OLD GLOBE

THE GLOBE AT A GLANCE

The sixth-largest regional theatre in the country, The Old Globe offers more programming and a greater repertoire than any theatre of its size.

As a not-for-profit theatre with an annual budget averaging $20 million, the Globe earns $10 million in ticket sales and must raise an additional $10 million from individual and institutional tax-deductible donations.

The Globe provides more than 20 different community and education programs to nearly 50,000 people annually.

The Old Globe has sent 20 productions to Broadway since 1987.

In 1987, The Old Globe/University of San Diego Master of Fine Arts program was established to provide the highest caliber in training of young classical actors.

In its 75 years, The Old Globe has produced 23 Pulitzer Prize-winning plays, starting with William Saroyan’s The Time of Your Life in 1947. We are adding to that list Tracy Letts’ 2008 winner, August: Osage County. The Pulitzer is one of the highest honors an American play and playwright can receive. The best winners are plays that give a sense of the time in which they were written but that also speak to us over the decades. I am confident August: Osage County will be one of those plays that future generations will find relevant. Letts has imagined a bold comedy-drama in the grand scale about an imploding American family. As much as the Weston clan’s saga reveals truths about America in this new century, there is also a timelessness to the storytelling that echoes back to the Greeks.

To bring August: Osage County to life, I’m delighted to welcome director Sam Gold to the Globe. He is one of the most sought-after directors in the country, noted for the incredible performances he draws from his actors and the honesty of his storytelling.

Thank you for joining us for the final production of our 2010/2011 season. Enjoy the show.

Thanks to the generous and continued support from donors, subscribers and attendees like you, The Old Globe remains the sixth-largest not-for-profit theatre in the country and, with a $20 million budget, one of the most successful and financially stable. We rely greatly on contributed income, and your gifts in 2010 totaled more than $7 million — a number that must not only be sustained but continue to grow along with the institution.

This year, the Globe faces extraordinary challenges in fundraising from deep cuts in government funding and corporate foundation support. We're encouraged, however, that individuals are helping to make up the difference. Last year support from Circle Patrons, the Globe's major gifts program, increased considerably, a trend we hope your generosity will help us carry on.

The Globe’s solid financial performance in difficult economic times testifies to the consistent excellence of our productions, the steadfast support of our patrons and the professionalism of our magnificent staff. But we must not rest on our laurels. Your attendance and your gifts — especially your gifts — will tell the tale of 2011. I am confident that you will write the script for an even greater future at The Old Globe.

Thank you, and welcome to the regional premiere of August: Osage County.

Sincerely,

Harold W. Fuson, Jr.

Charles Isherwood begins his review of Tracy Letts’ August: Osage County in The New York Times in December of 2007 with this famed quote from Tolstoy. Letts’ funny and heartbreaking ode to the American middle-class family plumbs the depths to which it will stoop to rain misery down upon itself.

There is a lot to Tolstoy’s observation. First of all, it says something about the uniqueness of family tragedies, something that promises the perverse pleasure of uncovering hidden crimes. Of course we’d rather not have had the crime in the first place, but as long as it’s done, why not enjoy solving the mystery? But it also speaks to the importance of family tragedy as a subject for great and lasting drama.

Greek tragedy, noted for its absence of happy families, is thought to have developed from ancient Dionysian rites of spring. The characteristic shared by both genres of performance is the notion of sacrifice — the community cannot survive spiritually unless someone within, someone guilty, is made to suffer and die. Clytemnestra, for example, anticipates the return of her long-absent son Orestes with the deathless line, “Bring me an axe with which to kill a man.” The sacrifice is horrible, but it ensures the common good, and so despite the emotional cost, we derive a profound spiritual pleasure, a katharsis, from watching the act completed.

Our distaste for human sacrifice does not diminish our interest in unhappy families, perhaps because of our notions of the kinds of psychological damage that our families can do to us in our childhood. When the great American masters sought to reinvent the drama, they went back to the Greek well and drank deep. American drama is consequently punctuated with O’Neill’s Dionysian The Great God Brown and Oresteian Mourning Becomes Electra, Miller’s Oedipal A View from the Bridge, Williams’ Elysian A Streetcar Named Desire and Wilson’s Homeric Fences, The Piano Lesson and...
Osage County, Oklahoma, is the largest county in the state. It is one of three counties in the U.S. with that name; the others are in Kansas and Missouri. The county acquired this name because it lies wholly within the Osage reservation. The word “osage” is a corruption of the name of the local indigenous tribe, the Wa-sha-she, and the names of many states (including Iowa, Arkansas, Kansas and Missouri) are named after various branches of the Osage tribe. One of their most famous leaders was Pawhuska, or “White Hair,” so named after he took a powdered wig off a fallen American officer during a battle in Ohio. The officer escaped, but Pawhuska wore the hair as a trophy.

In the 19th century, the Osage gathered in Oklahoma to join the French fur trade; this period was marked by violence between the Osage, the Cherokee and the Kiowa. In 1818 and again in 1825, the U.S. government forced treaties on the Osage that compelled them to give up their territories in exchange for land in Kansas. They sent warriors to fight on both sides of the Civil War; those who fought for the South later suffered punitive measures and lost more land. The tribe continued to be pressured as white settlers sued to have the land opened, stole timber from the tribal forests and depleted the local game. Meanwhile, the Cherokee were also under threat of starvation as the government revoked treaties that benefited the tribe and refused to enforce others that protected them.

The Osage and the Cherokee, former enemies, entered into one of the most legendary real estate deals in history. In the 1870s, the Osage sold their Kansas holdings and bought more than a million acres from the Cherokee: this is now Osage County. But the problems of the Osage were far from over. Perhaps 50% of the tribe subsequently died from diseases like smallpox and cholera, and the buffalo upon which they depended for meat had been scoured from the plains by 1875. In 1906, under pressure from the U.S. government, repeatedly cheated and gouged by the agencies created to support them and suffering from an epidemic of alcoholism, the Osage agreed to divide their lands. Thanks to the foresight of Chief James Bigheart, however, the Osage were able to retain a portion of the mineral rights of their lands, which would pay off big when the astonishingly profitable oil exploitation of the region began in earnest.

Other famous folks who have roots in Osage County include Herbert Hoover, who moved to the area with his uncle and guardian in 1878. Hoover grew up among Osage children and made a member of the neighboring Kansa tribe, Charles Curtis, his Vice President. Clark Gable worked the Osage oilfields, and Tom Mix was a town marshal in the region until a Wild West show sent him to Hollywood. The first Boy Scouts of America troop was created in 1909 in the town of Pawhuska. Maria and Marjorie Tallchief, from Fairfax, were among famous Native American ballerinas.

CRAIG NOEL (Founding Director) was first appointed director in 1939, directing 15 productions prior to World War II. Since then he directed more than 200 plays of all styles and periods and produced an additional 270 productions. His vision for The Old Globe resulted in the establishment of the Shakespeare Festival and the San Diego Junior Theatre in the late ‘40s, the expansion to two theatres in the ‘50s, Globe Educational Tours in the ‘70s and Teatro Meta and the Old Globe/University of San Diego MFA program in the ‘80s. During the 1940s, Mr. Noel served as dialogue director for the 20th Century Fox Studios and was the former director of the Ernie Pyle Theatre in Tokyo. Described by Variety as the eminence grise of San Diego theatre, Mr. Noel is one of the few San Diegans to have had an entire year (1987) proclaimed in his honor, and to be named one of San Diego’s “Living Treasures.” He was a founder of the California Theatre Council and a former vice president of the California Confederation of the Arts. His numerous honors include The San Diego Union-Tribune list of 25 persons who shaped the city’s history; the Governor’s Award for the Arts; University of Arizona Alumni Association’s Outstanding Citizen, for his contribution to their Fine Arts department; San Diego State University’s Outstanding Alumnus; Conservator of American Arts Award from American Conservatory Theater; the San Diego Press Club Headliner Award; San Diego Gentleman of Distinction Award; and a combined tribute from the Public Arts Advisory Council and the San Diego County Board of Supervisors. Mr. Noel was particularly proud of the following three honors representing education and theatre: Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters, University of San Diego, Honorary Doctorate in Fine Arts, San Diego State University and the annual Awards for Excellence in Theatre named in his honor by the San Diego Theatre Critics Circle. In 2007, he received the National Medal of Arts – the nation’s highest honor for artistic excellence – in a ceremony at the White House. Craig Noel died on April 3, 2010 at the age of 94.

The set you will see at this performance of August: Osage County is the third multi-story house on the Globe stages this season, following Brighton Beach Memoirs, Broadway Bound and Rafta, Rafta... These houses don't just provide a location for the characters in their plays; each structure becomes its own character and provides clues to the lives and struggles of the people within it. Below, the three scenic designers for these plays share their thoughts and inspirations.

Ralph Funicello | Brighton Beach Memoirs and Broadway Bound
When director Scott Schwartz and I first discussed ideas for the set for the Neil Simon plays Brighton Beach Memoirs and Broadway Bound, we both noticed that, although the set had to function as an absolutely real dwelling, Eugene, speaks about half of his lines directly to the audience. He is literally telling them the story of what went on in this house during two important periods in his life. We wanted the house to be another character from his remembered past, just like the other members of his family. We approached this in two major ways. For Brighton Beach Memoirs, everything inside the house was carefully created to evoke an accurate vision of life in the early 1940s for a middle class home in that section of Brooklyn. We wanted the house to convey the warmth and protective feeling a boy has toward his childhood home. In Broadway Bound, the time has moved forward a decade. Now the house, like the family, feels a bit stale and cold. It is no longer a refuge to come home to. The now-grown sons are just waiting to leave and get on with their lives. Our big idea was to place this very real house (complete with a second story exterior wall that could close off or reveal the upper bedrooms) alone in the middle of a shiny black stage and to have the actors enter and leave this world through the aisles in the audience. When Eugene stands in the audience looking at this house, this image from his childhood, he then turns and faces the audience as if to say, “Yes, that is what it looked like. That’s how I remember it.”

Alexander Dodge | Rafta, Rafta...
The house in Rafta, Rafta... is a typical working class English terrace house in suburban Manchester. The houses are generally two-story modest brick buildings attached in long rows. Here, the audience views the life of the family unfold as if through the wall of the adjoining house. Much is made about the lack of privacy throughout the play, so the shell of the house is quite thin, and upstage the walls are actually made of scrim. The orange surround and over-scaled marigold curtain evoke the spirit of the wedding celebration that permeates the house as well as the play itself.

David Zinn | August: Osage County
The house is based on a real house that Sam Gold, the director, and I found on a research trip to Oklahoma. It’s a Craftsman – sort of on the later-side of that period (an early 20th century style of architecture and design). The house is a huge character in the play—its oppressiveness, how closed off it is to the outside, its darkness in relation to the vast brightness of an Oklahoma summer. All of these things made us feel it was important for the house to seem very real, filled with the detail of these characters and their history, the history of the house, of their renovation and occupation.
Illuminating Insights

“HEARING WHAT THE DIRECTOR HAD TO SAY ABOUT THE SHOW REALLY MADE ME THINK ABOUT IT IN A COMPLETELY DIFFERENT WAY.”

A Planned Gift Ensures a Strong Tomorrow for The Old Globe

What is the Craig Noel League?
Founded in 2000 and named for the Globe’s Founding Director, the League is a planned giving society for the Globe comprised of individuals who have included The Old Globe in their estate plans. Through their generosity, these supporters of the Theatre are helping to ensure a long and bright future for San Diego’s leading cultural landmark.

What is a Planned Gift?
Planned giving is simply a way to support The Old Globe through your estate plans by establishing an irrevocable bequest of property, stock or cash; a charitable trust; a living estate; or some other deferred giving instrument. In your estate plans, you have the ability to designate the specific use of the funds given to the Globe, and to help guide your decision, The Old Globe Board of Directors has established specific giving areas that you may choose from, including classical theatre and Shakespeare, education programs and new works.

How do I make a Planned Gift?
Simply call the Globe and schedule an appointment for a confidential meeting, or visit with your estate planner or attorney. You may also attend one of several seminars held throughout the year to become more acquainted with estate planning.

How can a Planned Gift help me?
A planned gift can reduce your income tax, increase your yearly income, help you avoid capital gains tax, distribute your assets to family members at a reduced tax rate and, most importantly, support an organization you love! You will also have the satisfaction of knowing your gift will impact generations of future theatregoers and that The Old Globe will remain a leader in the theatre arts for decades to come!

To become a member of the Craig Noel League or to tell us of a gift you have already made, please contact Bridget Cantu Wear, Associate Director of Development, Planned Giving, at (619) 231-1941 ext. 2312 or bcantuwear@TheOldGlobe.org.

Join us and become a part of our active community with a variety of exciting events like our Annual Member Event on Thursday, August 25 in the Craig Noel Garden followed by a theatre performance. Attend one of our monthly lunches – “Food for Thought” – and meet a Globe artist or attend one of the many Opening Night receptions.

RESTROOMS
Restrooms are located in the lower lobby of the Old Globe Theatre, the lobby of the White Theatre and adjacent to the Festival Theatre.

SEATING OF LATECOMERS
Although we understand parking is often a premium, the seating of latecomers is extremely disruptive. Latecomers may be given alternative seating and will be seated at an appropriate interval.

YOUNG CHILDREN
Children five years of age and under will not be admitted to performances.

Use of recording devices and cameras is not permitted. Please silence all digital watches, pagers and cellular phones prior to entering the theatre.

ASSISTED LISTENING SYSTEM
For the convenience of our hard of hearing and hearing-impaired, The Old Globe has an Assistive Listening System in both the Sheryl and Harvey White Theatre and the Old Globe Theatre. A limited number of the lightweight headsets, as well as induction neck loops, may be obtained from the house manager prior to performances.
