2011 SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING
THE TEMPEST
AMADEUS

IN REPERTORY

MAY 29th - SEPTEMBER 25th
Welcome to the 2011 Shakespeare Festival. I’m delighted to have both Adrian Noble and Ron Daniels back after their great success with last summer’s Festival as we once again present two of Shakespeare’s plays alongside a modern classic.

This year’s Festival is filled with music, magic and mystery. The summer includes Shakespeare’s final (and some say his greatest) play, The Tempest, Shakespeare’s wittiest comedy, Much Ado About Nothing, and Peter Shaffer’s Amadeus, a lavish journey through the life of Mozart. Again and again in these plays, passions flare and jealousy leads to war, whether it be the fierce rivalry between two musicians, the epic power struggle between two dukes or the merry battle of two lovers destined for the altar.

Of course, what makes the Globe’s Summer Shakespeare Festival truly distinctive is our talented cast of repertory actors. There is nothing more exciting than seeing an actor completely transform in order to play vastly different roles – a hero one night and maybe a villain the next.

As the sun fades in the San Diego sky and these stories are brought to life under the stars, the experience is truly spectacular. Please enjoy your evening, whichever show you are seeing. I hope that you will return for all three plays and make the Shakespeare Festival a part of your summer celebrations.

Sincerely,

Louis G. Spisto

Welcome to The Old Globe's 2011 Shakespeare Festival!

Last year’s Festival marked the Globe’s milestone 75th Anniversary and launched a year of celebrations. Occasions for celebrating were plentiful last year, and now we celebrate yet another San Diego summer with our nationally-acclaimed Festival.

Schools were scarce in Shakespeare’s era and standing as groundlings at the original Globe may have been the only education available to many. The Globe’s own summer education programs, known as The Shakespeare Initiatives, flourish in the summer, bringing a wide array of opportunities for theatregoers of all ages to enhance their theatrical understanding and enjoyment. The Insights Seminars and Shakespeare in the Garden lectures feature discussions with artists and scholars, and the Summer Shakespeare Intensive for high school students immerses young actors in live theatre, culminating in a performance on the Festival stage. Go to our website or call the Globe to learn more about our rich education programs that annually reach tens of thousands of San Diegans.

We extend our warmest thanks to the donors, subscribers and ticket buyers whose generosity makes the work on our stages possible, especially all Annual Fund donors, Season and Production Sponsors, Circle Patrons, Globe Ambassadors, Corporate Partners and those leaving a legacy gift through the Craig Noel League.

Now sit back in our new Festival seats and celebrate the evening.

Sincerely,

Harold W. Fuson, Jr.

The 2011 Shakespeare Festival is dedicated to Globe Benefactors

J. Dallas Clark & Mary Hollis Clark
(1913 - 2005)  (1921 - 2010)

The Old Globe is deeply saddened by the recent loss of longtime friend and benefactor Mary Hollis Clark, and with the passing of Mary, The Old Globe would like to dedicate the 2011 Shakespeare Festival to Mary and her husband Dallas, who began his service on The Old Globe’s Board of Directors in 1946.

A Georgia native, Mary wasted no time in immersing herself in the community after arriving here in 1946 as the bride of an Army captain who had deep San Diego roots – J. Dallas Clark. Mary and Dallas played a vital role in the city’s cultural growth, helping to shape modern-day San Diego through their community involvement and generosity. They were passionate about Balboa Park, where they both fostered longtime relationships. For 18 years, Mary served as a trustee of the San Diego Museum of Art and from 1964 on served as a trustee of the Natural History Museum. For his part, Dallas worked tirelessly on behalf of the Zoo, serving as trustee and president, as well as a trustee at the Mingei International Museum. As philanthropists, the Clarks’ gifts were often quiet and anonymous – except when they believed their gifts would encourage others to donate. But it was the time and work they put into the organizations they cared about that distinguished them as the true philanthropists they were.

Dallas played a key role in the Rebuilding Campaign immediately following the Globe’s devastating fire of 1978. In the 1980s, he served as one of the Chairs of the Theatre’s Advancement Campaign and helped establish the Globe’s Endowment Fund with Mary, making one of its charter gifts.

Globe Executive Producer Louis G. Spisto said, “Dallas and Mary were extraordinarily critical to the development of The Old Globe. The fondness I felt for the couple will remain in my heart forever.”

Of all the work on our stages, Dallas and Mary particularly loved the Shakespeare Festival and the Lowell Davies Festival Theatre. With great respect and affection, we dedicate this year’s Shakespeare Festival, so dear to their hearts, to Dallas and Mary Clark.

Those interested in honoring the life of this tremendous couple through a gift to The Old Globe may contact Marilyn McAvoy Bergman at (619) 231-1941 x2309.
Karen and Don helped launch the Globe’s Capital Campaign in 2006 by making a significant gift, and in recognition, the new education center is named in their honor.

John A. Berol
SEASON SPONSOR | THE TEMPEST

Having previously enjoyed Shakespeare at school and on stage, John Berol was delighted to discover San Diego’s enthusiasm for Shakespeare in Balboa Park upon moving to the city in 1977. Aware of the fragile dependence of artistically driven theatre upon charitable support from individuals, John joyfully joined in with contributions including sponsorship of Dancing at Lughnasad, Voir Dire, Labor Day, Twelfth Night (2001), Pericles, Much Ado About Nothing, The Two Noble Kinsmen, The Winter’s Tale, Titus Andronicus, Measure for Measure, The Merry Wives of Windsor, Twelfth Night (2009) and last year’s The Taming of the Shrew.

Kathryn Hattox
SEASON SPONSOR | AMADEUS

In 1997 Kathryn joined The Old Globe Board of Directors. She has served as Board Chair and continues today as a member of the Executive, Finance, Craig Noel League and Endowment Committees. In recognition of her leadership gift to the Globe’s historic Capital Campaign, the multipurpose performance and event room located in the Education Center carries the name of Hattox Hall. Kathryn has generously supported the Globe each year as a Production Sponsor for such plays as Lucky Duck, Rough Crossing, All My Sons, The Boswell Sisters, As You Like It, Measure for Measure, Cyrano de Bergerac and last year’s critically acclaimed King Lear.

Legler Benbough Foundation
SEASON SPONSOR | MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING

The Legler Benbough Foundation is committed to improving the quality of life for people throughout the city of San Diego. The Foundation addresses a wide range of issues and challenges and invests in rebuilding disadvantaged communities, preserving valuable cultural assets like Balboa Park for future generations and supporting nonprofit scientific research and development organizations. The Globe appreciates the Foundation’s generous support.
Pamela A. Farr
PRODUCTION SPONSOR | MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING

With homes in San Diego and Greenwich, Connecticut, Pam has served on the Globe’s Board of Directors since 2005 and currently heads the Audit Committee. After many years as Chair of the Greenwich Chapter of the American Red Cross, Pam was appointed National Chair of Volunteers in 2008 after serving as National Finance Chair. She was involved in several national and state initiatives including the 9/11 Recovery Program Advisory Group. Pam is a partner in Muirhead Holding, a private equity investment firm in Greenwich, and as a former consultant with McKinsey & Co. served a variety of Fortune 500 companies.

Barbara Kjos
PRODUCTION SPONSOR | AMADEUS

Barbara Kjos has been a loyal patron of The Old Globe since the summer of 1973, when she and her late husband, Neil, moved to San Diego from Chicago. Their love of Shakespeare originally drew them to the Globe, and providing support for the Festival was a natural fit for the couple. Neil owned and operated the enormously successful Neil A. Kjos Music Company, which continues to set the standard in the educational music publishing industry. Barbara continues to support the San Diego Opera, San Diego Symphony and Mainly Mozart, among others, and enjoys time with her grandchildren.

Union Bank
PRODUCTION SPONSOR | THE TEMPEST

As part of its pledge to reinvest in the communities it serves, Union Bank supports The Old Globe in many ways. Bank employees have regularly volunteered with education programs attached to Dr. Seuss’s How the Grinch Stole Christmas!, Executive Vice President, Retail Banking Group, Joseph Benoit serves on the Board of Directors and Union Bank has supported numerous productions including The Glass Menagerie, Othello, A Midsummer Night’s Dream, Imaginary Friends and As You Like It. The Old Globe salutes Union Bank for its longtime support.

It seems like yesterday that I boarded a plane to San Diego to direct my first season as Artistic Director of The Old Globe Shakespeare Festival last year. In fact there was a time when I thought I was never going to make it, as all flights out of the U.K. were grounded on account of an ash cloud over Europe.

But arrive in San Diego I did, albeit a full half-week late for rehearsals. And what a momentous time it proved to be! We had assembled a terrific, talented, highly motivated group of actors, supported and inspired by our very special M.F.A.s, and together we created a season of plays of which I am enormously proud.

I said in my introduction to last year’s program that I wanted to build something special. I couldn’t have hoped for a better foundation, and this year we will indeed build on last year’s success. I have invited back most of last year’s acting company, as well as Ron Daniels, director of The Taming of the Shrew. We will also have the same set, costume and lighting designers and the same composer. We have a great team, and we will again endeavor to achieve the highest standards of verse-speaking combined with visually ravishing, indeed spectacular production values.

I will be directing The Tempest, a mysterious, beautiful and very funny play, written just before Shakespeare’s retirement to Stratford. Miles Anderson, who triumphed in last year’s The Madness of George III, returns to play Prospero, as well as Salieri to Jay Whittaker’s Mozart in Peter Shaffer’s multi-award-winning Amadeus, which I will also direct.

Much Ado About Nothing, one of the greatest comedies in the language, completes our repertoire. The odd couple of Beatrice and Benedick is played by Georgia Hatzis and Jonno Roberts (who you may remember as last year’s Petruchio and Edmund).

I am sure you will enjoy all of these productions.

Adrian Noble, Artistic Director, 2011 Shakespeare Festival
If it ever becomes possible for the dead to sue the living for slander, there aren't many who would have a stronger case than poor Antonio Salieri.

Although he was one of the most important Viennese composers of his time, he is mainly remembered today as the villain in Peter Shaffer’s 1979 play Amadeus. The play, which was later made into a film of the same name in 1984, presents Salieri as a mediocre musician who becomes Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart’s archenemy out of jealousy. After sabotaging Mozart’s career and having a role in his death, Salieri eventually ends up in an insane asylum following a suicide attempt. In a futile effort to be remembered, Salieri leaves behind a confession that he had poisoned the great composer but eventually dies in obscurity. If Salieri is remembered at all these days, that memory is largely shaped by F. Murray Abraham’s haunting performance as Salieri in the movie version.

While Shaffer took considerable liberties with the story of Mozart and Salieri, the actual facts about their relationship, the circumstances of Salieri’s death and what happened afterward are considerably more complicated. Although Mozart and Salieri had been rivals (they both wrote Italian operas) and Mozart would accuse Salieri of using his influence with Emperor Leopold against him, their relationship seemed friendly enough on the surface. There is evidence that Salieri had undermined Mozart’s success at times (although Mozart often caused many of his own problems with his abrasive personality), but never to the extent suggested in Shaffer’s play. After Mozart’s premature death, Salieri was one of the few mourners who attended his sparse funeral and would later train Mozart’s son, Franz Xavier, as a musician.

There were numerous theories surrounding the death of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart on December 5, 1791, but modern historians tend to agree that he died of natural causes (probably due to rheumatic fever as well as the repeated bleedings that doctors gave him to treat his final illness). Despite numerous rumors at the time that Mozart had been poisoned (with possible villains including the Freemasons, fellow musicians or even the husband of one of his students), Salieri wasn’t implicated.

After a lifetime as a successful composer and musician, Antonio Salieri’s health began to decline. His music began to fade in popularity as more prominent composers came along, although he trained some of the greatest musicians of his generation. Salieri began to suffer regular episodes of depression and, by the early 1820s, had become increasingly frail. In the spring of 1823, Salieri fell and struck his head, which apparently left his legs paralyzed. While his eldest surviving daughter cared for him at home, she eventually arranged for him to be transferred to the Vienna General Hospital in October of that year. Which is when the rumors started.

Although there is some evidence that Salieri had somehow injured his throat before being taken to the hospital, the rumors suggested far more. Old allegations that Mozart had made against Salieri emerged, accusing him of sabotaging Mozart’s career. The story that Salieri had confessed to poisoning Mozart and cut his throat out of remorse became the talk of Vienna. It probably didn’t help that Mozart’s widow, Constanze, did nothing to put the rumors down (despite the help that Salieri had given her son in launching his musical career). The idea that Mozart had been poisoned had never really died down, and the circumstances of Salieri’s illness made him a perfect suspect. If there’s any mercy, it’s that Salieri was probably too ill to even be aware of the allegations made against him (which also made it impossible for him to defend himself).

While Salieri’s friends and colleagues rallied to his defense, the rumormongers were hard at work. At an 1824 performance in Vienna, a leaflet was distributed to the audience containing a poem that depicted Salieri as Mozart’s rival “standing by his side with the poisoned cup.” Letters on the subject were written back and forth, and Mozart’s own physician was pressed to provide details of the composer’s final illness to rule out the possibility of poisoning. (Since Mozart’s grave was lost, an autopsy would have been out of the question even for 19th century medicine.)
“Serenade No. 10 for winds” (“Gran Partita”) (K361)
Composed: Vienna, 1781 or 1781-84
Most likely started in 1781 while Mozart was in Munich, this serenade is a prime example of how he elevated the musical form, far surpassing previous composers’ uses of the same ensemble.

“C Minor Mass” (K427)
Composed: Vienna, July 1782 - May 1783
Mozart was not known for his sacred works, having composed them only to gain favor of the clergy when necessary. The “Kyrie” and “Gloria” were likely written in thanks for his marriage and probably written for Constanze, his new wife, to sing. The work, however, was abandoned and never completed.

“Le nozze di Figaro, ossia la folle giornata”
(“The Marriage of Figaro, or the Day of Madness”) (K492)
Premiere: Vienna, Burgtheater, May 1, 1786
The first of his three opera collaborations with librettist Lorenzo Da Ponte. According to legend, “Figaro” was completed in just six weeks from the time that Mozart was presented the libretto.

“Don Giovanni” (K527)
Premiere: Prague, National Theatre, Oct 29, 1787
The second of the Da Ponte collaborations, this opera reflects a refinement of the style. Mozart crafted the opera in just two acts, instead of the traditional three (or in the case of “Figaro,” four). Mozart requested a libretto of Da Ponte in February 1787 and, owing to the resounding reception of “Figaro” in Prague, premiered the opera only eight months later.

“Così fan tutte” (“Thus do all [women]”) (K588)
Premiere: Vienna, Burgtheater, Jan 26, 1790
The third and final collaboration between Mozart and Da Ponte. There is now belief that Salieri also attempted to set this libretto to music, with two pieces having been discovered in 1994 in the Austrian National Library. In a letter dated December 29, 1789, Mozart makes references to Salieri’s plot, which “have completely failed already.”

“Die Zauberflöte” (“The Magic Flute”) (K620)
Premiere: Vienna, Theater auf der Wieden, Sept 30, 1791
The last of Mozart’s operas that premiered during his lifetime. The opera is the result of an apparently very enjoyable collaboration with theatre troupe manager Emanuel Schikaneder. The style of the piece is that of Singspiel, a style more like the operetta of today.

“Requiem” (K626)
Composed: Vienna, late 1791
His only sacred work since “C Minor Mass,” “Requiem” was not finished by Mozart. After his death, Constanze passed the unfinished works to Franz Xaver Süssmayr, a friend and copyist of Mozart. To this day, scholars disagree as to where Mozart’s work ends and Süssmayr’s begins.

Even after Salieri finally died on May 7, 1825, the accusations continued. To try settling the rumor that Salieri had confessed to the murder, his physician, Joseph Rohrig, and the two attendants who had been with him continually during his illness signed sworn affidavits that no confession had been made in their hearing. Although the accusations died down, a juicy rumor isn’t so easily suppressed.

The poisoning rumor seemed largely forgotten until the Peter Shaffer play and the movie version brought it back to public attention. Ironically, the publicity from the poison rumor has also sparked a renewed interest in Salieri’s music. Many of his operas have been released on DVD and there has even been a push by opera companies to feature some of his work as part of their regular season.

If Salieri does manage a comeback, it may represent an intriguing example of the lasting power of rumor. Even after centuries, a good story can still linger—especially when Hollywood is involved.

Perhaps an interesting, if obvious, way to describe Much Ado About Nothing for theatre-goers who saw The Taming of the Shrew at the Festival last year would be to say that in spite of sharing some themes, Much Ado About Nothing is quite different from The Taming of the Shrew!

Gone is the near-farclcial tone of Shrew. Gone, the raucous free-for-all encounters. Gone, the boisterous goings-on in the streets of the city.

Much Ado has moved indoors, into the halls and gardens of Leonato’s country estate. There is no brawling with strangers and no fractious name-calling between angry neighbors.

A darker tone has crept into Much Ado, and the witty exchanges between old lovers and longstanding friends is quieter, more mature and more domestic.

A sense of a real place and a real period pervades Much Ado. The characters themselves are far more complex than in Shrew, and the situations they find themselves in are not just extravagantly performed but also more fully experienced.

As the army of rough soldiers fresh from the battlefield enters into the peaceful world of women, two very different cultures collide: that of the soldiers, who mask their insecurities in manly gruffness and easygoing affability, and that of the women, who hide their strength in politeness and poise.

Strangers to each other, the men and women regard one another with as much wariness as they do with curiosity and delight. How is it possible to know what someone really thinks or feels without looking into their heart? How is it possible to know who they really are? Or even to trust them?

Much Ado About Nothing is full of jokes that seem to denote a general sense of emotional instability and sexual anxiety. Commitment to one another is fraught with danger. Infidelity and betrayal seem inevitable in a marriage. Appearances deceive and lead to heartache. Tragedy is barely—and only accidentally—averted.

But as the two worlds clash, the way the men and women see each other is comically turned upside-down and challenged, and it is only then, with penitent remorse and prayers of contrition as much as with a simple shrug of the shoulders, that they begin to recognize themselves for who they really are and accept the love they truly feel for one another.

Ron Daniels is the director of Much Ado About Nothing.
IF MUSIC BE the FOOD of LOVE, PLAY ON!

This year’s Shakespeare Festival is one of the most musical ever. In addition to the lyricism of Much Ado About Nothing and the music and ceremony of The Tempest, this season features Peter Shaffer’s Amadeus, about one of the greatest musicians the world has ever known, Wolfgang Mozart. Below, Dan Moses Schreier and Shaun Davey, who have each composed original music for this year’s Festival, share their experiences and inspirations while composing for these plays.

I have been fortunate to work with Adrian Noble on five Royal Shakespeare Company productions. Adrian is one of the few directors who makes me feel I can tackle anything with confidence and freedom. It’s a collaboration in which ideas are easily shared and understood.

The music for The Tempest was composed in a shed in a leafy valley in County Wicklow, Ireland. In rehearsal we explored ways of adding the live musical talents of the cast, largely through percussion and singing. Broadly speaking, the melodies of the songs provide the seeds of the underscore – carried on the air of Prospero’s island – and a sound that reminds us of past wrongs in a distant society, important to help understand the ruthlessness of Prospero’s hunger for revenge.

It is often said that The Tempest is the most musical of Shakespeare’s plays; certainly music is the specified medium through which Ariel does his master’s bidding. The characters are required by Shakespeare to move in a virtual cloud of musical sounds. Although Shakespeare’s stage directions indicate where music is vital, the placement and style of the music has to have a rationale, a storytelling logic that makes sense to the audience. Unusually, the challenge seems to have more to do with finding the correct placements of silence.

In Shakespeare’s late plays, music is often summoned at points of reconciliation, healing or awakening from death. In The Tempest, his last play, music is used in a much wider sense. Firstly, music as a charm: Prospero’s spirit-agent, Ariel, is in effect armed by Shakespeare with the power of underscore, amplified from time to time in song. The shipwrecked nobles and politicians are both governed and policed by the music of Ariel. In raucous contrast, with the arrivals of Caliban, Stephano and Trinculo, a clumsy, rough and tumble music grows into a song of rebellion. Another form of music, increasingly present, is the music of ceremony. This is created by Prospero himself, notably in his creation of a musical pageant to celebrate the betrothal of his daughter. This is the music that, with “spirits to enforce, art to enchant,” Prospero, in his final address, tells us he will never use again.

Shaun Davey is the composer for The Tempest.

I start by reading the play and meeting with the director. What is wonderful about Shakespeare is that there are so many possible directions one can take the interpretation of the play. Sitting down with the director and hearing his or her ideas about how to approach the text is the real beginning of my process. Music is also suggested by the different worlds the characters inhabit. The women’s world is one of domesticity and the men’s world is military. These worlds inform the music.

Shakespeare leads the way in Much Ado About Nothing because he has written lyrics for songs that are part of the play. He has also notated that the actors dance at certain points of the play. I start with the songs, then work to the dance sections. Then there are scenes that cry out for musical scoring, like the funeral procession and the cemetery, which I approach next.

The first thing I composed for Much Ado was Shakespeare’s song “Sigh No More” that Balthasar sings. The style of the song is based on director Ron Daniels’ suggestion that it would have been performed at a Schubertiade (an event held to celebrate the music of Franz Schubert). Ron is very imaginative and erudite. He has very specific ideas about how he would like to approach the play and at the same time has been very open to the musical ideas I have suggested based on our discussions.

Dan Moses Schreier is the composer and sound designer for Much Ado About Nothing and sound designer for The Tempest.
The Tempest is generally acknowledged as William Shakespeare’s final play and one of his most poetic. Magic, humor, regret and love weave together into a beautiful exploration and celebration of life. These facets of The Tempest have inspired many other artists over the past four centuries in all fields of art: painting, literature, opera, dance, film and more.
Many poets have been inspired by the lyricism of The Tempest. Following the publication of Charles Darwin’s ideas on evolution, Robert Browning (pictured here) explored questions of mankind and religion in “Caliban upon Setebos,” which imagines the play’s characters grappling with theological and philosophical quandries.

From the mid-18th century, The Tempest began to appear as the subject of paintings. Instead of focusing on the central character of Prospero, John William Waterhouse based his 1916 painting “Miranda - The Tempest” on Prospero’s daughter as she worriedly witnesses the shipwreck that begins their story.

Sculpture is also one of the art forms The Tempest has taken. This sculpture by Milton Hebald, which depicts a windswept Prospero and Miranda, has been displayed for decades outside the Delacorte Theatre in New York, home of The Public Theater’s Shakespeare in the Park. It serves as a permanent embodiment of the lasting legacy of Shakespeare’s work.

A number of choreographers have adapted The Tempest for ballet, transforming Shakespeare’s poetic dialogue into the equally poetic language of movement. For example, Gordon Peirce Schmidt’s 2008 ballet, pictured here, was charged with athleticism and energy that breathed new life into the characters.

At least 46 operas and semi-operas based on The Tempest exist. Lee Hoiby’s The Tempest, pictured here in a 2007 production at Purchase Opera, uses instruments and voice to not just communicate the words of the characters, but also to simulate the shipwreck and Ariel’s flight. Grand, colorful costumes and sets also enhance the theme of magic that pervades the piece.

The Tempest first appeared on film in 1905 in a two-and-a-half-minute snippet by Charles Urban that was hand-tinted to provide color to the otherwise-monochrome film. Over the years, many versions have been filmed, including modern-day updates and even B-movie sci-fi flicks. The play was most recently seen on film in a 2010 movie directed by Julie Taymor that cast Prospero as a woman, played by Helen Mirren.

Sculpture is also one of the art forms The Tempest has taken. This sculpture by Milton Hebald, which depicts a windswept Prospero and Miranda, has been displayed for decades outside the Delacorte Theatre in New York, home of The Public Theater’s Shakespeare in the Park. It serves as a permanent embodiment of the lasting legacy of Shakespeare’s work.

A Planned Gift Ensures a Strong Tomorrow for The Old Globe

What is the Craig Noel League?
Founded in 2000 and named for the Globe’s Founding Director, the League is a planned giving society for the Globe comprised of individuals who have included The Old Globe in their estate plans. Through their generosity, these supporters of the Theatre are helping to ensure a long and bright future for San Diego’s leading cultural landmark.

What is a Planned Gift?
Planned giving is simply a way to support The Old Globe through your estate plans by establishing an irrevocable bequest of property, stock or cash; a charitable trust; a living estate; or some other deferred giving instrument. In your estate plans, you have the ability to designate the specific use of the funds given to the Globe, and to help guide your decision, The Old Globe Board of Directors has established specific giving areas that you may choose from, including classical theatre and Shakespeare, education programs and new works.

How do I make a Planned Gift?
Simply call the Globe and schedule an appointment for a confidential meeting, or visit with your estate planner or attorney. You may also attend one of several seminars held throughout the year to become more acquainted with estate planning.

How can a Planned Gift help me?
A planned gift can reduce your income tax, increase your yearly income, help you avoid capital gains tax, distribute your assets to family members at a reduced tax rate and, most importantly, support an organization you love! You will also have the satisfaction of knowing your gift will impact generations of future theatregoers and that The Old Globe will remain a leader in the theatre arts for decades to come!

To become a member of the Craig Noel League or to tell us of a gift you have already made, please contact Bridget Cantu Wear, Associate Director of Development, Planned Giving, at (619) 231-1941 ext. 2312 or bcantuwear@TheOldGlobe.org.

Join us and become a part of our active community with a variety of exciting events like our Annual Member Event on Thursday, August 25 in the Craig Noel Garden followed by a theatre performance. Attend one of our monthly lunches – “Food for Thought” – and meet a Globe artist or attend one of the many Opening Night receptions.
