When I was planning this 75th Anniversary Season, I was determined to add a play by Alan Ayckbourn. He is the third-most produced playwright at the Globe after Shakespeare and Shaw. As I tried to choose among the 73 plays he had written up to that time, I was delighted to discover that he had just completed his 74th play and immediately contacted him to secure the American premiere for the Globe.

Life of Riley is vintage Ayckbourn in both form and content. In a device that Ayckbourn has used before, Riley doesn’t actually appear on stage. His plays are often filled with off-stage secondary characters, but this is the first time the title character doesn’t appear. However, Riley’s presence does resonate through the lives of his six friends, and we get to know his character through how each of them deals with his imminent death. In their relationships with Riley and each other, we can see the comic foibles of our own lives.

I’m certain that long-time Globe director and head of The Old Globe/University of San Diego Graduate Theatre Program Richard Seer will bring us another comic gem. He is joined by Old Globe Associate Artist Bob Morgan, who has designed both the set and the costumes, frequent collaborator Chris Rynne on lighting and our own Paul Peterson on sound.

I am excited to share with you this wonderful new play by an old master.

Thanks to the generous and continued support of donors and subscribers like you, The Old Globe completed 2010 with its eighth consecutive balanced budget. Earned revenue of $13.2 million and charitable contributions of $7.1 million brought total revenue to $20.3 million—an operating budget that keeps the Globe the sixth-largest not-for-profit theatre in the country.

We sold 214,000 tickets, a 13% increase over 2009, making 2010 our most successful year in ticket sales since the Globe started tracking attendance. While down $550,000 due to cuts in government grants and the closure of a corporate foundation, fundraising showed a significant increase in individual giving. Overall, individual giving was up by 8%, and Circle Patrons, the Globe’s major gifts program, realized a 13% increase over the previous year.

This financial performance in difficult economic times testifies to the consistent excellence of The Old Globe’s productions and the professionalism of a magnificent staff. But we must not rest on our laurels. Your attendance and your gifts—especially your gifts—will tell the tale of 2011. I am confident that you will write the script for an even greater future at The Old Globe.

Thank you, and welcome to the U.S. premiere of Alan Ayckbourn’s Life of Riley.

Sincerely,

Harold W. Fuson, Jr.,

This September, should you be lolling on the beach in Scarborough, a seaside resort in the northeast corner of England 200 or so miles north of London, and wondering what to do after the sun goes down, you might take yourself to the Stephen Joseph Theatre and catch the premiere engagement of Neighbourhood Watch, the latest play by Sir Alan Ayckbourn. It’s not only the newest but his 75th play – and that’s not counting 20 or so one acts, revues and plays for children.

That’s right: 75 theatrical works, some of which, as you are reading this, are probably being performed in 35 different languages around most of the play-going world and one of which, Life of Riley, his 74th, you are about to see in its American premiere at this very theatre where 10 of his other plays have already found a welcome.

Ayckbourn was born in London in 1939 to a father who was a violinist and a mother who wrote short stories and novels. They separated when he was about four. His mother married again, this time to a bank manager, and they moved about a bit, which didn’t keep Ayckbourn from observing early on the wear and tear of married life, especially for people who can’t be happy together.

After boarding school, where he played Peter in Romeo and Juliet and Macduff in “the Scottish play,” he skipped university, although he was soon to work at the professional theatre in Oxford, where much later in life he would become a visiting professor. Then he plunged instead into the hard-knock life of English provincial theatre.

In 1957, he met and fell under the spell of Stephen Joseph, an advocate of the then-avant-garde theatre-in-the-round. Joseph was running a 250-seat summer theatre in a little concert room above the Scarborough Library. Ayckbourn had to ferret out a map to see exactly where the resort town was.

One day, the 19-year-old Ayckbourn, an actor and sometime-assistant stage manager, was complaining about the inanity of a role he was playing, and Joseph, the then-artistic director, dared him to write a better part in a better play.

Ayckbourn did and Joseph staged it to some summertime success. Then the fledgling playwright wrote another that proved equally popular with the sunburned beach-lovers. In 1964, the precocious playwright next tried one out in London and it was mauled by the critics. Ayckbourn, now temporarily an ex-playwright, licked his wounds in Leeds, where he produced weekly radio dramas for the BBC until Joseph cajoled him into returning to Scarborough to try again.

He did, and in 1965, over several late nights, he penned in longhand a four-character comedy that was to become Relatively Speaking, snatches of which you will hear being rehearsed in Life of Riley – an inside joke for longtime Ayckbourn aficionados. This verbal farce is a gem of comic invention and elegant construction about confused identities in which no one knows exactly who is whose relative. It later went on to London, and this time he had a smash hit.

But one metropolitan success didn’t go to Ayckbourn’s head, and he returned dutifully, almost religiously, to Scarborough where, after Stephen Joseph’s death at 46 from cancer in 1967, Ayckbourn was ultimately appointed artistic director and faithfully and punctually
Over the next 40 or so years, Ayckbourn has churned out a stream of dazzling works, many defying the sometimes limiting confines of stage conventions regarding the use of theatrical space and time, turning our expectations upside-down. Most will also reduce us to gales of laughter at the expense of the characters on stage and of those of us in the seats who will admit to seeing a tad of ourselves in those same characters. At the heart (and there is plenty of heart) of Ayckbourn’s plays there is always a sympathy for the foibles and frailty of his fellow creatures… all right, there are a couple of out-and-out irredeemable villains. But most of all, he has kept a beady eye on the shift of values in Great Britain, and, although he describes himself as “apolitical,” some subtle social comments about the state of the nation peek out here and there.

Maimed marriages also constantly draw his attention: husbands who are uncomprehending and ineffectual or are insensitive and domineering and wives who are just neglected or hopelessly innocent or driven crazy. Such characters tend to dominate his work between 1969 (with How the Other Half Loves) and 1985 (with Woman in Mind), when Ayckbourn turned out many of his best-known and most successful plays that brightened stages in England, America and around the world.

After Woman in Mind, Ayckbourn took a two-year leave from Scarborough to run a program at the National Theatre in London. There he was to mount five plays (he has directed 260 productions so far in his lifetime). One was to be an original of his, A Small Family Business, written specially for the 1200-seat Olivier Theatre. On that mammoth stage, a full-scale dollhouse-like structure would be built with four rooms and halls to accommodate the crimes and misdemeanors of its 17 characters.

There was nothing Scarborough-small about this set or cast size but especially about its subject matter, namely what Ayckbourn saw at the emotional and moral implosion of British society during the reign of Margaret Thatcher, elected Prime Minister in 1979. A moral malaise of extreme free enterprise is traced through one family where a minor shoplifting incident (“theft is theft”) uncovers family members pilfering petty cash, padding expense accounts, engaging in industrial espionage and marital infidelity and culminating in drug addiction and ultimately murder. A darkish comedy? No, it was jet-black, maybe even more morality play-plus-farce.

Streaks of these darker hues have been hinted at in a couple of characters in earlier plays: in Season’s Greetings (1980), a loathsome, near-fascist, pistol-packing uncle is revealed as a racist and a chauvinist; in Way Upstream (1981), an allegory of the ship of state, a river-rat pirate commandeers the cabin cruiser of two vacationing couples and becomes a virtual dictator as they cruise towards Armageddon.

These more sober plays, still splashed with splotches of sunlight, foreshadowed several more in the next decades about things to come in a futuristic, technocratic, robot-driven society.

That’s right: 20 more plays at least, plus two major personal events. In 1997 Alan Ayckbourn became Sir Alan, the first playwright to be knighted since Terence Rattigan was so honored in 1971. Then, in February 2006, came a stroke, which hospitalized Ayckbourn for over eight weeks while theatre-lovers around the world held their breaths… and then sighed with relief as several more plays rolled forth from Scarborough, including Life of Riley.

In a recent hour-long radio interview, Ayckbourn said he is feeling just fine at 72 and still smiles benignly on his frail fellow mortals, some of whom thank him for his inestimable insights into our fallen natures, for his endlessly inventive ways of telling our stories, for his sometimes scary predictions of our futures, but especially for his indomitable efforts and successes in breaking down our preconceptions of the nature of theatre and of humankind.

Ken Happe is a retired professor of Classics from Holy Cross College in Worcester, Massachusetts where he also directed extracurricular productions of Greek tragedy, Roman comedy and modern musicals when he wasn’t reviewing plays for a local weekly, which is how he came to see productions of some 25 wonderful Ayckbourn plays – including several at Scarborough.
John Godber tells the story of a woman who expressed disappointment when she saw a production of Samuel Beckett’s Waiting for Godot, saying she knew Godot would never arrive because his name didn’t appear in the program.

To avoid further disappointment I must own up that in Life of Riley, a prominent absentee from the published cast list is George Riley himself.

The use of offstage characters is a common enough device in most plays, either these days for economic reasons or artistically merely to simplify matters.

As a standard weapon in a playwright’s armory, I have used this device on countless occasions, usually in smaller roles. This is probably the first time for me that one has featured as a — if not the — principle protagonist.

Early on I learned that for every character on stage one could also include one or even several that never appear. And not merely to keep costs low, which was and still is an important consideration.

But over and above mere cost, offstage characters serve to extend the limited onstage world, lending the illusion of existence beyond the visible community populating the tiny stage area.

As characters, they can also, by dint of their invisibility and sheer non-presence, take on roles that the principle onstage protagonists cannot. I discovered this early on in Absurd Person Singular (1972), which, though on paper a six-hander, is essentially, through the inclusion of Dick and Lottie Potter, an eight-hander. This pair of unseen, ebullient teachers serves to create the nightmarish offstage Christmas parties to which we, the audience, from the safety of the kitchen, are grateful not to have been invited.

Indeed, so successful did Dick and Lottie become that they threatened in some productions to run away with the show. From hints and clues provided by the onstage characters, the audience delighted in filling in the gaps themselves, creating their own images of this hearty couple whose booming merriment can be heard every time the kitchen door is opened.

Later, in The Norman Conquests (1973), the offstage unseen mother lies in her bed manipulating her luckless offspring. We count ourselves lucky she never makes it downstairs.

These offstage worlds can occasionally take on lives of their own. A few years later in Bedroom Farce (1975), the onstage newlyweds Malcolm and Kate give a disastrous housewarming party that ends in pandemonium. It was only 30 years later when I was directing a revival of Relatively Speaking, dating from 1965, that I discovered the young lovers Ginny and Greg in that play anachronistically recall first meeting at the same party at Malcolm and Kate’s. Spooky!

In one instance, an offstage character so took my fancy that I gave him a major onstage appearance in a later play. Thus the unfortunate and awkward offstage. Dr. Bill Windsor from Intimate Exchanges (1982) was later to return in a major onstage role in Woman in Mind, awkward as ever and still unable to open his damaged doctor’s case three years later.

By my reckoning, I have at this point created over 400 onstage named characters and probably (though I haven’t even begun to count them) at least the same quantity of those other characters, referred to but never putting in an appearance. The unseen hoard.

Please welcome, then, the latest recruit to their number, George Riley. Since you will never meet him in person, you are at liberty to make of him what you will. Just don’t believe everything people say of him.

Oh, I nearly forgot: keep a special ear open for talk of Basil and Dorothy Bender, who are almost certainly going to put in an appearance in a future play. If they haven’t already done so....

A LONG and UPROARIOUS Relationship

No living playwright has been produced more at The Old Globe than Alan Ayckbourn. Life of Riley is the 11th of his plays presented here, following a three-decade relationship with the dramatist that started in 1978 with a production of How the Other Half Loves. Below is a look at the Ayckbourn plays that have been seen at the Globe.

•  •  •  •  •  •  •

HOW THE OTHER HALF LOVES (1978) This play takes place in two different overlapping, superimposed living rooms in which two different dinner parties take place on two different nights, at the same time, with the same two guests but different hosts. A comic masterpiece that shatters all preconceptions of theatrical time and space.

THE NORMAN CONQUESTS (1979) A triumphant trilogy that tries to keep up with three different couples on a weekend in a family’s country house as they dash through rooms, each the setting of three different plays, but which all repeat the same time span and show the same events from a different perspective.

RELATIVELY SPEAKING (1981) A young couple finds themselves further and further trapped in a web of affairs and confusion as he proposes to the woman he loves... or so he thinks. Over the course of the play, even the audience can’t be sure who is in love with whom.

TAKING STEPS (1984) This comedy takes place in a three-story Victorian pile of a house, but the trick here is that the attic, master bedroom and sitting room are all flattened to share the same plane, connected by equally supine staircases.

SEASON’S GREETINGS (1985) A simple family Christmas is turned upside-down by misunderstandings and wayward love. A comedy of errors ensues as mistaken identities, love triangles and a raucous puppet show lead to the liveliest holiday season the family has ever seen.

INTIMATE EXCHANGES (1987) Described as an octopus, it’s a marvelous marathon that runs 16 hours with 30 scenes and countless costumes changes for 10 characters, all played by just two actors, plus 16 different endings (depending on the characters’ choices). What you see depends on the night(s) you go.

MR. A’S AMAZING MAZE PLAYS (1994) A young girl and her dog notice the sounds in their neighborhood suddenly disappearing and search for them in the spooky mansion of a suspicious new neighbor. But the duo asks the audience what they should do next, which turns every performance into a new adventure.

TIME OF MY LIFE (1995) Another of Ayckbourn’s time plays, three alternating timelines follow different members of a large family whose history of love and sadness is revealed as time moves backwards and forwards on stage.

BEDROOM FARCE (1999) A splitting couple ruins a good night’s sleep of three other couples as they invade their bedrooms (all always in view, placed side by side) during one very long and very riotous night.

THINGS WE DO FOR LOVE (2000) A woman begins an affair with her best friend’s fiancé, and things quickly descend into violence as three stories of their building become the stage for tumultuous confrontations (and a revealing ceiling mural).

ALAN AYCKBOURN
(Playwright) was born in Hampstead in 1935 to a violinist father and a mother who was a writer. No doubt he inherited their creativity but a bigger gift was his first close-up view of two people who couldn’t be happy together. By 1945 they had split up and in 1948 his mother married her bank manager. Utterly incompatible, she had a complete breakdown before Alan persuaded her to leave home. He left school at 17 with two ‘A’ levels and an exhaustive knowledge of miserable relationships perceived through the woman’s eyes which may explain so much of his writing. Two years in regional theatre as an actor and stage manager led in 1959 to the writing of his first play The Square Cat for Scarborough’s Theatre In the Round at the instigation of his then employer and subsequent mentor, Stephen Joseph. Some 74 plays later, his work has been translated into over 35 languages, is performed on stage and television throughout the world and has won countless awards. There have been English and French screen adaptations, the most notable being Alain Resnais’ fine film of Private Fears in Public Places. Major successes include Relatively Speaking, How the Other Half Loves, Absurd Person Singular, Bedroom Farce, A Chorus of Disapproval, The Norman Conquests (recently revived to great acclaim by Matthew Warchus), A Small Family Business, Henceforward..., Comic Potential, Things We Do For Love, House & Garden and My Wonderful Day. He is also a noted director and it was only in 2009 that he retired as Artistic Director of the Stephen Joseph Theatre, Scarborough, a post he held for 37 years. Indeed, he would perhaps consider his greatest achievement to be the establishment of this permanent home for the Theatre in the Round company he first worked for all those years ago when the splendid two auditoria complex fashioned from a former Odeon Cinema opened in 1996. His current plans include the world premiere of Dear Uncle, an adaptation of Anton Chekhov’s Uncle Vanya and, in the autumn of this year, the premiere of his 75th play Neighbourhood Watch. In addition to the many honorary degrees and other awards he has received, he was recently inducted into American Theatre’s Hall of Fame, received the Society of London Theatres’ Special Award and this year has been honoured with a Special Tony Award for Lifetime Achievement in the Theatre as well as the Critics’ Circle Award for services to the arts. He was knighted in 1997. (Biography supplied by Alan Ayckbourn’s official website www.alanayckbourn.net.)

Since then he directed more than 200 plays of all styles and periods and produced an additional 270 productions. His vision for The Old Globe resulted in the establishment of the Shakespeare Festival and the San Diego Junior Theatre in the late 40s, the expansion to two theatres in the 50s, Globe Educational Tours in the 70s and Teatro Meta and the Old Globe/University of San Diego MFA program in the 80s. During the 1940s, Mr. Noel served as dialogue director for the 20th Century Fox Studios and was the former director of the Ernie Pyle Theatre in Tokyo. Described by Variety as the eminence grise of San Diego theatre, Mr. Noel is one of the few San Diegans to have had an entire year (1987) proclaimed in his honor, and to be named one of San Diego’s “Living Treasures.” He was a founder of the California Theatre Council and a former vice president of the California Confederation of the Arts. His numerous honors include The San Diego Union-Tribune list of 25 persons who shaped the city’s history; the Governor’s Award for the Arts; University of Arizona Alumni Association’s Outstanding Citizen, for his contribution to their Fine Arts department; San Diego State University’s Outstanding Alumnus; Conservator of American Arts Award from American Conservatory Theater; the San Diego Press Club Headliner Award; San Diego Gentleman of Distinction Award; and a combined tribute from the Public Arts Advisory Council and the San Diego County Board of Supervisors. Mr. Noel was particularly proud of the following three honors representing education and theatre: Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters, University of San Diego, Honorary Doctorate in Fine Arts, San Diego State University and the annual Awards for Excellence in Theatre named in his honor by the San Diego Theatre Critics Circle. In 2007, he received the National Medal of Arts – the nation’s highest honor for artistic excellence – in a ceremony at the White House. Craig Noel died on April 3, 2010 at the age of 94.
“HEARING WHAT THE DIRECTOR HAD TO SAY ABOUT THE SHOW REALLY MADE ME THINK ABOUT IT IN A COMPLETELY DIFFERENT WAY.”

INSIGHTS SEMINARS

The only thing better than seeing a show is seeing a show and having a chance to meet the playwright, director, actors and designers face to face. At The Old Globe, our audience members can meet members of the artistic team of each and every show.

An Insights Seminar is a chance to hear about the thought processes behind artistic choices made for the production and an opportunity to ask questions before actually seeing the show.

SHAKESPEARE IN THE GARDEN LECTURES

For theatre-loving San Diegans, summer means balmy evenings watching classical theatre under the stars at The Old Globe. Shakespeare lovers look forward to it all year long.

Audiences gather in the Craig Noel Garden to listen to a member of our artistic team present a talk on the play they are about to see. Then, armed with information, insight and the inside scoop, audience members walk a few feet to the theatre.

POST-SHOW FORUMS

Cast members return to the stage following the performance for a short discussion with the audience. These question-and-answer sessions delve into acting choices, directorial styles, how the actors create and think about their characters and myriad topics that give our audiences an immediate addition to their experience.

“Honestly, I never even knew what a dramaturg was, so this discussion was an eye-opener.”

“His stories were hilarious! What a great opportunity to hear from such a witty playwright.”

“I’m so glad I came early tonight. The lecture was fun and interesting and a great way for me to prepare for the play before taking my seat in the theatre.”

“I liked being able to grab a meal from Lady Carolyn’s Pub and sit in the garden and hear a lecture about the play. What a great start to the evening.”

What is the Craig Noel League?
Founded in 2000 and named for the Globe’s Founding Director, the League is a planned giving society for the Globe comprised of individuals who have included The Old Globe in their estate plans. Through their generosity, these supporters of the Theatre are helping to ensure a long and bright future for San Diego’s leading cultural landmark.

What is a Planned Gift?
Planned giving is simply a way to support The Old Globe through your estate plans by establishing an irrevocable bequest of property, stock or cash; a charitable trust; a living estate; or some other deferred giving instrument. In your estate plans, you have the ability to designate the specific use of the funds given to the Globe, and to help guide your decision, The Old Globe Board of Directors has established specific giving areas that you may choose from, including classical theatre and Shakespeare, education programs and new works.

How do I make a Planned Gift?
Simply call the Globe and schedule an appointment for a confidential meeting, or visit with your estate planner or attorney. You may also attend one of several seminars held throughout the year to become more acquainted with estate planning.

How can a Planned Gift help me?
A planned gift can reduce your income tax, increase your yearly income, help you avoid capital gains tax, distribute your assets to family members at a reduced tax rate and, most importantly, support an organization you love! You will also have the satisfaction of knowing your gift will impact generations of future theatregoers and that The Old Globe will remain a leader in the theatre arts for decades to come!

To become a member of the Craig Noel League or to tell us of a gift you have already made, please contact Bridget Cantu Wear, Associate Director of Development, Planned Giving, at (619) 231-1941 ext. 2312 or bcantuwear@TheOldGlobe.org.

Join us and become a part of our active community with a variety of exciting events like our Annual Member Event on Thursday, August 25 in the Craig Noel Garden followed by a theatre performance. Attend one of our monthly lunches – “Food for Thought” – and meet a Globe artist or attend one of the many Opening Night receptions.

Craig Noel League members Garet and Wendy Clark enjoy lunch with Jane Austen’s Emma star Patti Murin at the monthly luncheon series, “Food for Thought.”
In recognition of their unique contribution to the growth of The Old Globe and their special talent, we take great pride and pleasure in acknowledging as Associate Artists the following individuals who have repeatedly demonstrated by their active presence on our stages and in our shops, that wherever else they may work, they remain the heart and soul of the Globe.
