HORTON FOOTE’S
DIVIDING the ESTATE
Welcome to Harrison, Texas! This mythical small town is the setting not just for Dividing the Estate, but for all of Horton Foote’s plays. His carefully observed, surprisingly funny plays have earned him a place as one of the great American playwrights, and it is a pleasure to bring his work to the Globe for the first time. For this production, we are thrilled to welcome theatre legend Elizabeth Ashley to the Shiley Stage, along with two of Horton Foote’s extraordinary children carrying on their father’s legacy: Hallie Foote and her brother, Horton Foote Jr.

We are also pleased to welcome director Michael Wilson to The Old Globe. This is his first collaboration with us, but he will be returning this summer to direct Michael Kramer’s Divine Rivalry, the true story of a painting competition between Michelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci. Our recently announced summer season also brings Adrian Noble back to The Old Globe as the artistic director of our 2012 Summer Shakespeare Festival. Adrian will be directing Shakespeare’s As You Like It and the great American classic Inherit the Wind. He will be joined by renowned director Lindsay Posner, who will helm our production of Shakespeare’s Richard III.

The final show in our summer season is Yasmina Reza’s Tony Award-winning comedy God of Carnage, directed by our own Richard Seer.

We hope to see you often at The Old Globe in this new year.

The start of another year is a time for resolutions: commitments to try something new or to return to honored values. At The Old Globe, the board and staff are making resolutions, too, as we challenge ourselves with ambitious financial and artistic goals.

The Globe’s mission statement, established years ago by Founding Director Craig Noel and Artistic Director Emeritus Jack O’Brien, charges us with “preserving, strengthening and advancing American theatre through a commitment to ensuring diversity and balance in programming.” One of our resolutions is to recommit to this mission in the plays we present on our stages.

Kicking off the winter season, the Globe presents two vastly different productions reflecting our commitment to programming balance. On the Globe’s Shiley Stage is a traditional Broadway play: the West Coast Premiere of Horton Foote’s Dividing the Estate. In the White Theatre is a World Premiere from a new voice in the American theatre: Jonathan Caren’s The Recommendation. The Globe’s tagline of “Broadway’s Best and San Diego’s Finest” is aptly represented by both productions you are about to experience in the Conrad Prebys Theatre Center.

We hope that one of your own resolutions is to stay a part of the Globe family as subscribers and donors in 2012. Warm wishes for a happy New Year!

Sincerely,

Harold W. Fuson, Jr.

Others in the World of the Estate
Horton Foote was born in Wharton, Texas, on March 14, 1916. His first play, Texas Town, was produced in 1941 in New York. For the next 68 years, until his death on March 4, 2009, Foote continued to write plays that illuminated a century of rural Texas life. Foote first achieved prominence in the 1950s and 1960s writing television plays, especially for “Philco-Goodyear Television Playhouse,” “Playhouse 90” and “The DuPont Show of the Month.” In 1953, he adapted his television play The Trip to Bountiful for a Broadway production featuring Lillian Gish, Eva Marie Saint and Jo Van Fleet.

In 2008 Dividing the Estate, directed by Michael Wilson, appeared on Broadway and earned a Tony nomination for Best Play. It later moved to Hartford Stage in May 2009.

In 2009, the nine-play The Orphans’ Home Cycle—which includes Roots in a Parched Ground, Convicts, Lily Dale, Courtship, Valentine’s Day, 1918, The Widow Claire, Cousins and The Death of Papa—premiered at Hartford Stage and Off Broadway at Signature Theatre Company. The three-part repertory, under the direction of Michael Wilson and designed by Jeff Cowie, David C. Woolard, Rui Rita and John Gromada, featured Devon Abner, James DeMarse, Hallie Foote, Maggie Lacey and Jenny Dare Paulin. It received the Lucille Lortel Award for Outstanding Play, Drama Desk Lifetime Achievement Award, Outer Critics Circle Award for Outstanding New Off-Broadway Play and New York Drama Critics’ Circle Award for Best Play.

Other plays by Foote include The Habitation of Dragons, The Last of the Thorntons and The Roads to Home.

Foote’s numerous film credits include screenplays of his own work, including Courtship, On Valentine’s Day, 1918 and Lily Dale, as well as adaptations. Foote received an Academy Award and the Writers Guild of America Award for his screenplay of Harper Lee’s To Kill a Mockingbird. His original screenplay Tender Mercies also won him an Academy Award. He adapted John Steinbeck’s Of Mice and Men for the 1992 film featuring John Malkovich and Gary Sinise.

In 1994, Signature Theatre Company dedicated its entire season to the works of Horton Foote. In 1995, he received the Pulitzer Prize for Drama and a Lucille Lortel Award for an Individual Body of Work for The Young Man From Atlanta, which also received a Tony nomination for Best Play in 1997. Foote was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Letters in 1998, and in 2000, he received the National Medal of Arts and was awarded an honorary degree at the University of Hartford. In 2002, he received the Texas Medal of the Arts Award in literature and arts.

A memoir of his childhood, Farewell, was published in 2000, and a second volume about his early career, Beginnings, was published in 2001.
Hallie, you have done Dividing the Estate multiple times now and are considered the foremost interpreter of your father’s plays. What do you find compelling about this play in particular?

HALLIE FOOTE: It’s a wonderful play. Every time we do it, it feels a little bit different and I think it gets better. People love to see it, and the actors have a lot of fun playing the roles. I hope to be able to do it again after this.

Horton, you haven’t been on stage in many years. What brings you back now?

HORTON FOOTE JR: I stopped acting almost 17 years ago to open a restaurant and my whole life focus kind of changed. In the past two or three years, I’ve really started feeling like I would, just one last time, like to do something of my father’s for sentimental reasons. I found out that the circumstances were correct, and I very gently threw my hat into the ring.

When was the first time you appeared together in one of your father’s plays?

HORTON: Was it The Habitation of Dragons, Barbara Hallie?

HALLIE: We did film versions of 1918 and On Valentine’s Day in 1985 and 1986, then we did The Widow Clare, The Habitation of Dragons and our sister’s play, God’s Pictures. And we did Laura Dennis together at Signature Theatre.

What are you most looking forward to about working together again?

HALLIE: We have a good time working together, actually.

HORTON: I’m very excited to be working with Barbara Hallie again. It’s always fun. My father was very easy to work with. I felt very safe and had a great time. It was always a very satisfying artistic experience.

HALLIE: I think actors love working on his plays, in parts that he writes, because they are very rich, and you can keep mining them. It’s almost endless, the things you discover about the characters. That’s not always the case with all plays.

Was his work as a playwright something that you were always aware of while growing up? Or was it something that was more separate from you?

HALLIE: He always wrote at home. He had an almost pathological dislike of being away from all of us. He did love the theatre, don’t get me wrong, but he wasn’t crazy about going out to Hollywood and getting jobs. He loved being at home and writing. He could write around a lot of chaos, but if he was up in the attic, where he wrote, and the door was closed, it probably not a good idea to disturb him.

HORTON: I remember vividly, when we lived in the house in Grandview, New York, I also had a bedroom in the attic. I remember him sitting in his chair, with a steno pad and pencil, and he had this beautiful unabridged dictionary on a beautiful stand. His door was always open when he was writing in the afternoon, and almost every day, coming home from school, I would run up there and see him.

HALLIE: He was a clear presence, a daily presence. It got to the point that when he would travel, he would take one of us with him.

Do you have a favorite play of your father’s?

HORTON: I think it’s Dividing the Estate. To me, it’s almost miraculous. Although people don’t think of my father as a comedy writer, I find all of his plays funny. But this play, it’s not like comedy. It’s just real life exposed in a way that you can’t help but identify with it, and you can’t help but find it hysterical.

HALLIE: I always say my favorite play is the one I’m working on. I agree that people don’t think of my father as funny sometimes, but even his sad plays have a lot of humor in them. It’s partly because that’s just part of life—sometimes people can be very funny, despite whatever else is going on. I also think there’s a timeless quality to his plays. They’re set in a certain time and place, but that doesn’t limit them. As an example, Dividing the Estate takes place in 1987, but we started working on it in 2008, when the market was really crashing and the collective panic was palpable. Life repeats itself, and I think my father was very tapped into that. Certain universal themes often happen over and over again.

How do you see your father’s legacy as an American playwright?

HALLIE: I think he was one of the great writers of the 20th century. My siblings and I have started a foundation to educate people about his work and his importance as a writer. I really feel strongly about it.

HORTON: People don’t realize that his career on Broadway spanned over 60 years. He was a pioneer of early television with Paddy Chayefsky, Rod Serling and Tad Mosel. And he’s one of the most prolific playwrights in the world.

HALLIE: Over 60 plays.

HORTON: He always wrote what he knew how to write; he didn’t try to pattern his work around what was fashionable. He always stuck to his guns.

HALLIE: He was blessed. He always knew what he wanted to do. And I think it was almost a mystical experience for him. He deeply loved it. But he also couldn’t not write. There was just no way.

HORTON: There are very few people I’ve ever met who had that purity, that kind of calm. He had a certain peace about him, and that peace was that he knew why he was here on this planet. He was a writer.

Since then he directed more than 200 plays of all styles and periods and produced an additional 270 productions. His vision for The Old Globe resulted in the establishment of the Shakespeare Festival and the San Diego Junior Theatre in the late ’40s, the expansion to two theatres in the ’50s, Globe Educational Tours in the ’70s and Teatro Meta and the Old Globe/University of San Diego MFA program in the ’80s. During the 1940s, Mr. Noel served as dialogue director for the 20th Century Fox Studios and was the former director of the Ernie Pyle Theatre in Tokyo. Described by Variety as the eminence grise of San Diego theatre, Mr. Noel is one of the few San Diegans to have had an entire year (1987) proclaimed in his honor, and to be named one of San Diego’s “Living Treasures.” He was a founder of the California Theatre Council and a former vice president of the California Confederation of the Arts. His numerous honors include The San Diego Union-Tribune list of 25 persons who shaped the city's history; the Governor's Award for the Arts; University of Arizona Alumni Association’s Outstanding Citizen, for his contribution to their Fine Arts department; San Diego State University’s Outstanding Alumnus; Conservator of American Arts Award from American Conservatory Theater; the San Diego Press Club Headliner Award; San Diego Gentleman of Distinction Award; and a combined tribute from the Public Arts Advisory Council and the San Diego County Board of Supervisors. In 2007, he received the National Medal of Arts - the nation’s highest honor for artistic excellence - in a ceremony at the White House. Craig Noel died on April 3, 2010 at the age of 94.

A Planned Gift Ensures a Strong Tomorrow for The Old Globe

What is a Planned Gift?
Planned giving is simply a way to support The Old Globe through your estate plans by establishing an irrevocable bequest of property, stock or cash; a charitable trust; a living estate; or some other deferred giving instrument. In your estate plans, you have the ability to designate the specific use of the funds given to the Globe, and to help guide your decision, The Old Globe Board of Directors has established specific giving areas that you may choose from, including classical theatre and Shakespeare, education programs and new works.

How do I make a Planned Gift?
Simply call the Globe and schedule an appointment for a confidential meeting, or visit with your estate planner or attorney.

Join us and become a part of our active community with a variety of exciting events including an Annual Member Event, “Food for Thought” monthly lunches where you may dine with a Globe artist or attend one of the many Opening Night receptions held throughout the year.

To become a member of the Craig Noel League or to tell us of a gift you have already made, please contact Bridget Cantu Wear, Associate Director of Development, Planned Giving, at (619) 231-1941 x2312 or bcantuwear@TheOldGlobe.org.
