Welcome to the 2012 Summer Shakespeare Festival! The Old Globe is pleased to welcome back Adrian Noble, returning for his third season as Shakespeare Festival Artistic Director. Adrian is joined this year by Lindsay Posner, who is directing at the Globe for the first time. The Globe, in collaboration with the University of San Diego, celebrates the 25th anniversary of our Master of Fine Arts program this year. Considered the top classical actor training program in the country, the program’s talented students appear every year in our Festival and make a vital contribution to its ongoing success.

The Summer Shakespeare Festival is a unique opportunity to sit under the stars and experience some of the greatest plays of all time, performed by an unparalleled company of actors. It also offers the perfect chance to introduce someone to the theatre for the first time. As you enjoy this evening’s performance, I hope you will consider coming back and bringing someone new — new to San Diego, new to The Old Globe or new to the wonderful experience of theatre itself. Remember the wonder of your first time in the theatre and share that extraordinary feeling with someone this summer.

We hope to see you back this fall for the start of our 2012-2013 season! See page 32 in this program for the full list of shows. The new season features two classics of the world stage as well as two world premiere musicals and several acclaimed contemporary plays. The season truly represents what the Globe does best, and we can’t wait to share it with you.

Welcome to the 2012 Shakespeare Festival. With these three productions — plus two more on our other stages — we are summer hosts each year to visitors from all 50 states, plus as many as 20 foreign countries, and we’re pleased you’ve chosen to be a part of our summer.

In addition to the mainstage productions, the Globe’s award-winning education and community programs are a vital element of our mission “to provide education for theatre professionals, audiences and the community at large.” And during the Shakespeare Festival, in particular, the Globe’s Shakespeare Initiatives offer summer programs for theatregoers of all ages.

Designed to enhance audience understanding and enjoyment of the plays presented, these Initiatives include: Shakespeare in the Garden, a series of informal pre-show presentations featuring members of the Festival creative team; Insights Seminars, at which a panel of artists engages patrons in thought-provoking discussions of each play; and the Shakespeare Intensive, a four-week program created for high school-aged actors and actresses culminating with two Shakespeare plays in the Lowell Davies Festival Theatre.

Learn more about the Shakespeare Initiatives and our many other programs by visiting the Globe’s website or contacting our Education Department.

Again, I thank each and every one of you for supporting The Old Globe! Enjoy the summer here.

Sincerely,

Harold W. Fuson, Jr.
Chair, Board of Directors

THE 2012 SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL IS GRATEFULLY DEDICATED TO

Deborah Szekely

San Diegan Deborah Szekely, founder of the Golden Door and Rancho La Puerta, has long been known for her support of The Old Globe and her belief that community theatre is the wellspring of a city’s cultural heritage. What is sometimes overlooked is her motivation. In one word: gratitude.

Deborah credits the Globe as being her “mentor, support system and graduate school.” Early in life she turned to volunteer work here as a way to broaden her horizons, for she had married and opened Rancho La Puerta by the time she was 18. Her experiences included “doing anything that needed doing,” such as scraping gum off seat bottoms in 1947. Yet theatre enthralled her as she rose through the ranks. “The Globe was responsible for who I became,” she says today.

When the Globe was destroyed by arson, Deborah — by then a successful businesswoman — came to the rescue. “I said to Craig Noel, as he stood amidst the ruins, ‘Do not worry. I promise we will rebuild, and it will be better than ever.’” And rebuild they did. With Co-Chair Jim Mulvaney, Deborah raised more than $6 million.

Even greater than the Globe’s institutional influence was her personal friendship with Craig. “He was my mentor and best friend,” she remembers. “His intuition about everything that works in art and life was incredible. And he had great faith in me. He gave me confidence in my own instincts. Everything I may have ever done for the Globe is simply a partial repayment for all that the Globe and Craig have done for me.”
Having previously enjoyed Shakespeare at school and on stage, John Berol was delighted to discover San Diego’s enthusiasm for Shakespeare in Balboa Park upon moving to the city in 1977.

Elaine and Dave Darwin have served in leadership roles at The Old Globe for nearly 20 years. Karen, a graduate of USD law school, is involved with numerous major arts and cultural institutions. Don, founder and former CEO of DataQuick Information Systems Inc.—the nation’s foremost real estate data repository company—continues his career as an investor and is owner of Ballena Vista Farms in Ramona, one of Southern California’s largest thoroughbred racing, breeding and training facilities. Don serves as Immediate Past Board Chair, continuing his work on the Executive and Finance Committees. Karen first joined the Globe Board in 1992, serving two terms as Chair. The Cohens have supported several productions, most recently The Taming of the Shrew and last year’s The Tempest. Karen and Don helped launch the Globe’s Capital Campaign in 2006 with a significant gift, and, in recognition, the new education center is named in their honor.

Elaine and Dave Darwin
INHERIT THE WIND

Before moving to Rancho Santa Fe, Elaine and Dave lived in Palm Beach and Aspen where Dave served on the Corporate Board of the Aspen Music Festival and School. Among their many activities in Palm Beach, Dave, an environmental activist, chaired the Save the Dunes Committee and Elaine served on the Board of the Community Foundation for Palm Beach and Martin Counties. At the Globe, Elaine is a Vice Chair on the Executive Committee and serves on the Investment Committee. She is Chair of the Board Nominating Committee and the Artistic Director Search Committee. Currently, Elaine is Treasurer of the La Jolla Music Society. In 2011, Elaine and Dave sponsored Playwright-in-Residence Matthew Lopez’s world premiere play Somewhere. The Darwins enjoy being supporters of the arts and culture.

Barbara Kjos has been a loyal patron of The Old Globe since the summer of 1973 when she and her late husband, Neil, moved to San Diego from Chicago. Their love of Shakespeare originally drew them to the Globe, and providing support for the Festival was a natural fit for the couple. Neil owned and operated the enormously successful Neil A. Kjos Music Company, which continues to set the standard in the educational music publishing industry. Barbara continues to support San Diego Opera, San Diego Symphony and Mainly Mozart, among others, and enjoys time with her grandchildren.

Jeanette Stevens
AS YOU LIKE IT

A Chicago native and graduate of Indiana University, Jeanette was first engaged in the arts as a devoted, passionate student of dance within a family and university dedicated to cultural appreciation. Subsequently moving to San Diego, her first profession was as a teacher in public and private elementary schools, later teaching and choreographing ballet.
In 1997 Kathryn joined the Old Globe Board of Directors. She has served as Board Chair and continues today as a member of the Executive, Finance and Endowment Committees.

In recognition of her leadership gift to the Globe’s historic Capital Campaign, the multipurpose performance and event room located in the Education Center carries the name of Hattox Hall.

Kathryn has generously supported the Globe each year as a Production or Season Sponsor for such plays as Lucky Duck, Rough Crossing, All My Sons, The Boswell Sisters, As You Like It, Measure for Measure, Cyrano de Bergerac, King Lear and last year’s acclaimed production of Amadeus, directed by Shakespeare Festival Artistic Director Adrian Noble.

Currently, Jeanette is retired from her public relations career at SDG&E, having developed and managed various programs and partnerships there for many years. A former Board member at San Diego Ballet and La Jolla Music Society, Jeanette currently serves on the San Diego Youth Symphony Board and continues her enthusiastic involvement with arts organizations countrywide. A longtime Old Globe subscriber and patron, Jeanette derives immeasurable benefit from both performance experiences and from her meaningful relationships established at the Globe.

Gillian and Tony Thornley
RICHARD III

The connection between the Thornley family and Shakespeare is a deeply personal one. Amid the uncertainty and strife of World War II, Gillian’s parents met and married in the Bard’s rural hometown of Stratford-upon-Avon. They settled in a 17th century home neighboring Anne Hathaway’s cottage where the only source of running water was an outdoor pump, and cold, damp trips “down the garden path” were frequent. Often through makeshift amateur productions, the plays of Shakespeare, particularly the comedies, provided respite from the hardships of life, creating a unique bond with the playwright. In honor of their parents, who experienced the profound impact of Shakespeare’s works, as have theatregoers throughout the centuries and around the world, the Thornleys are proud to support The Old Globe in saluting this incredible playwright.

Joan and Irwin Jacobs have been enthusiastic supporters and loyal subscribers of The Old Globe for more than 20 years, during which time the theatre and the San Diego community have greatly benefited from their generosity and involvement. Previous Globe productions sponsored by Joan and Irwin include George Gershwin Alone, Macbeth, Resurrection Blues, Smash, Julius Caesar, Avenue Q, The Merry Wives of Windsor, King Lear, Golda’s Balcony and last year’s acclaimed production of Amadeus. The couple has been active philanthropically throughout the San Diego community, supporting numerous organizations including the University of California, San Diego (most recently with a $75 million gift to build the new Jacobs’ Medical Center), the new Central Library, the Museum of Contemporary Art, San Diego Symphony, San Diego Opera, La Jolla Playhouse, Museum of Photographic Arts, the New Children’s Museum and the San Diego Food Bank.

Union Bank has been a stalwart supporter of The Old Globe for more than 20 years, and it is continuing to reinvest in the communities it serves. The Bank has supported The Old Globe in many ways, including providing bank employees to serve as volunteers with theatre education programs attached to Dr. Seuss’ How The Grinch Stole Christmas!, and Vice President, Community Banking Group, Debbie Wilson serves on the Board of Directors. Union Bank has sponsored many productions including The Glass Menagerie, Othello, A Midsummer Night’s Dream and Imaginary Friends. The Old Globe applauds Union Bank for its longtime support.
many actors from tonight’s production are students in The Old Globe’s graduate acting program?

A joint venture of The Old Globe and the University of San Diego, the graduate acting program nationally recruits seven students each year to participate in an intensive two-year, year-round Master of Fine Arts degree program. The seven students are selected from hundreds who audition in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and San Diego to be part of this prestigious program.

I was invited to San Diego in 2010 as Artistic Director of the 75th anniversary Shakespeare Festival, and two years later I am still here. Why? The answer is simple: I had a wonderful time. I found an artistic freedom to create shows that I consider among the best of my career. I found a company and a staff willing and able to give their all and aspire to the very best. I found a space that was exciting and flexible. I could base our work on language, detailed characterization and bold visual statements. And I found an audience that was generous, discerning and open-minded.

This year I am directing one of my favorite plays, As You Like It. It is perhaps the most satisfying of Shakespeare’s comedies, full of love, wonderful characters and no less than four weddings at the play’s end. Shaun Davey, who wrote the award-winning score for last year’s The Tempest, is writing the music, and Dana Green returns to the Globe to play Rosalind.

I have invited Lindsay Posner, a hugely talented director of classics and contemporary work, to do Richard III, one of Shakespeare’s earliest smash hits. Jay Whittaker, the stupendous Mozart in last year’s Amadeus, plays the nefarious hunchback.

Completing the season is one of the jewels of the American dramatic crown, Inherit the Wind, which grips like a thriller from start to finish. It tells the story of an infamous trial and along the way celebrates the glories of democracy, justice and tolerance. You will certainly enjoy Robert Foxworth and Adrian Sparks locking horns as the two titanic lawyers.

I’m delighted to be back at the Globe for another summer of exciting theatre. Welcome to the 2012 Shakespeare Festival!

Adrian Noble, Artistic Director, 2012 Shakespeare Festival
Performing in Rep

The Old Globe’s annual Shakespeare Festival features three productions performed in repertory, where the same company of actors performs all three shows on alternating nights. The tradition of repertory acting has a long history at the Globe. When the Globe was founded in 1935, its original repertory company would perform shortened versions of up to seven different Shakespeare plays in a single day! For audiences, repertory productions offer the opportunity to see a variety of shows in a short period of time and to watch the same actors reinvent themselves night after night. For actors, performing “in rep” provides a unique challenge with surprising rewards.

Allison Spratt Pearce
Rehearsing three different shows at the same time is the best food an actor can ask for. We either thrive on the ride or fall off instantly and are pushed to test every level of our strengths and weaknesses as actors. Patience, ability, skill, experience and creativity are essential. In one show I might be a lead, in another a featured soldier and in another maybe even a dancing tree—all of which require the same amount of dedication and passion. I love the challenge and thrill of having to be mentally and physically on my toes at any moment of the day.

Dana Green
I consider myself extremely fortunate to have done a great deal of my work in repertory. I enjoy how during rehearsals and even in performance the plays and the roles feed each other and you discover things you might not have otherwise discovered while focusing on just one project. I also love the little kick you get coming back to a play after several days away. If it’s more than several days it can be terrifying, which isn’t as much fun, but then you get the bonding of “Whew! We survived!”

VIVIA FONT
One of the things that always strikes me about working in rep is how amazingly diverse Shakespeare’s plays are. As actors in repertory, we get the privilege of exploring our range in these differently told stories. In one season we can show our chops, doing both comedy and tragedy or, as in this season, a courtroom drama. What is wonderful about doing three shows for the same company during almost six months is the community that develops around the actors, crew and artistic staff.

ADRIAN SPARKS
From April to May, it’s a whirlwind of creativity—artists, technicians and staff working triple time. The intense rep rehearsal process for the actor is a juggling act of many characters and emotions requiring focus and dexterity. Perhaps a lover in the morning, a warrior in the evening—with singing, fighting, puppetry and dance rehearsals sprinkled throughout.

Acting in repertory is, to me, the essence of this thing we do. The shared lift we participate in brings together differing ages, backgrounds and experiences, and the communality of purpose is electrifying. We all learn from one another and give together to our audiences. That is the ultimate creative communication.

Scenic Designer Ralph Funicello on designing for the Festival Theatre

I've done repertory theatre for more than half of my career. I started designing scenery professionally at American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco, where we did a rotating rep with five productions in the theatre at all times, changing over every night from one complete set to another. Here at the Globe, the Shakespeare Festival uses a basic unit set—the wooden deck and the side galleries—for all three productions. When the directors and I meet, we talk about how we might use that basic set in each individual production. What I try to do in designing for the Festival is to provide as many entrances and exits as possible—as many interesting ways as I can for actors to get on stage. There's absolutely no attempt at any kind of naturalism. It's very much a performance machine, a theatrical space in which to perform the plays. We may add a piece of architecture—some glass doors or a proscenium arch—but we don't use that as a specific location. And we are always aware that we have to change the set every day.

Each of the three shows in this year’s festival offered unique challenges. For Richard III, director Lindsay Posner wanted the play to be extremely contemporary. He feels that the behavior we see in Richard III is the same behavior, the same motivation, that is apparent in every dictatorship and every insurrection that has happened in the last 10 or 15 years. There’s no reason to have to say that this happened 500 or 600 years ago. It happened six months ago, as well. Lindsay was interested in creating a space that would make that visible. We have created a kind of royal bunker—our equivalent for a castle or a palace—with people hiding there in fear of who might overthrow them. In Lindsay’s mind, Richmond is just as bad as Richard at the end of the play: it’s the same thing, just another name.

Inherit the Wind is written to take place in a courtroom, but Director Adrian Noble’s first charge was, “I don’t want a courtroom at all.” He thought we could be much more inventive about it, and we didn’t have to tie it down to realistic scenery. The first thing Adrian said when I met with him was that he wanted 20 to 25 American kitchen tables from the turn of the century through the 1930s and a collection of odd chairs. He wanted to construct the set by moving the tables around to create the space that we needed, using them not only as tables but as platforms. Adrian felt the kitchen table was a piece of Americana, with a kind of small-town feel to it. In small towns, that’s where things get discussed. It’s one of the focal points of family life. We decided to create the jury box by removing the first row of seats in the middle section and putting some of our mismatched chairs there. Ten members of the audience act as jurors, and the last two jurors are chosen onstage during the course of the play.

As You Like It is set in a golden age, a remembered time, and the design includes references to 1930s British railway art and to the work of artist Sir Stanley Spencer, particularly his Cookham paintings. Spencer painted biblical allegories, but the people in them are all his neighbors in Cookham. It might be called “Marriage at Cana,” but it looks like 1930s small-town England, with middle-class English people sitting around long tables eating English food. That’s a sort of visual reference for us for what the world will look like. Going into the forest of Arden, Celia and Rosalind enter a hostile winter wilderness that becomes magical with the arrival of spring. A white cloth becomes both a blanket of snow and a forest canopy. We also came up with the idea of suspending a very irregular cable grid over the entire auditorium with small light bulbs suspended from it, so there could be a ceiling of light, almost like stars.

Some people get to design one Shakespeare every year, or even one every four or five years. Having the opportunity to design two Shakespeares a year is fantastic. I’ve enjoyed all the Shakespeare productions I’ve worked on at the Globe, and they’ve all been very different. The more inventive and extraordinary the directors, the more challenging and fun it is to find new ways to put these plays on stage.
Amid the excitement of what was often called “the trial of the century,” one confrontation emerged as perhaps the greatest moment in American legal history. The year was 1925. Clarence Darrow, the most famous criminal defense lawyer in the country, was representing a small-town high school biology teacher, John Scopes. Scopes was on trial for violating Tennessee’s Butler Act, which prohibited the teaching of human evolution in public schools. In an unprecedented legal maneuver, Darrow called prosecutor William Jennings Bryan to the stand to testify as an expert witness. In the examination that followed, Darrow relentlessly attacked the Bible as a source of scientific knowledge, forcing Bryan to scramble to defend his religious opposition to evolution.

When Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee wrote Inherit the Wind in the early 1950s, they seized upon that moment, that epic conflict between two great men who stood on opposite sides of one of the most controversial issues of their time. Lawrence and Lee also borrowed the setting of the Scopes Trial, re-creating the carnival atmosphere of a small town that found itself at the center of a national media firestorm. But rather than create a historical docudrama from this material, they wrote a passionate defense of intellectual freedom in the face of fundamentalism that owed more to the era of McCarthyism than it did to the actual events of 1925. “Inherit the Wind is not history,” they explain in their prologue to the play. “The collision of Bryan and Darrow was dramatic, but it was not a drama... Inherit the Wind does not pretend to be journalism. It is theatre. It is not 1925. The stage directions set the time as ‘Not too long ago.’ It might have been yesterday. It could be tomorrow.”

Unlike Inherit the Wind’s passionate evolutionist, Bertram Cates, the real John Scopes was a football coach and part-time biology teacher. When Tennessee passed the Butler Act, the American Civil Liberties Union, hoping to bring the law to the attention of the U.S. Supreme Court, placed advertisements in local newspapers offering legal support to anyone who would stand as a test case of the law. The leading citizens of Dayton, Tennessee thought that a trial and the national attention it would draw might boost the local economy. When they asked Scopes to volunteer to be prosecuted, he agreed.

The national visibility of the Scopes Monkey Trial drew big-name attorneys on both sides of the case. Among the lawyers for the prosecution was William Jennings Bryan, a social reformer, three-time Democratic presidential candidate and one of the great orators of his generation. Over the course of his political career, Bryan became known as the Great Commoner; he campaigned passionately for women’s suffrage, a progressive income tax and the rights of workers and farmers. He was also deeply Christian and deeply opposed to evolution. Not only did Bryan fear the social application of evolution (he opposed eugenics and felt governments should protect the weak), he also felt that the growing public support of scientific theories like evolution was undermining the nation’s morality and religious foundation.

On the defense side, the ACLU had concerns about including Clarence Darrow on their team. Despite his well-earned reputation in the courtroom (Darrow had just staged a brilliant defense of thrill killers Leopold and Loeb), Darrow was an outspoken, even militant, agnostic, and the ACLU did not want to put religious faith on trial. Darrow considered himself a modernist, and he saw the Scopes Trial as an irresistible opportunity to battle religious fundamentalism and stand toe-to-toe with Bryan himself. “I believe I could bring him down,” he said.
The Wars of the Roses (1455-1487) were a series of civil wars fought in England between two branches of the royal family, the House of Lancaster and the House of York, each of which claimed the right to the throne. The history of the conflict goes back to the time of Edward III, who created five powerful dukedoms for his sons, naming them the first Dukes of Clarence, Lancaster, York and Gloucester.

Edward III was succeeded by his grandson, Richard II, who had no children. Instead of the throne passing peacefully to the next in line, the great-grandson of the Duke of Clarence, the unpopular Richard was overthrown by his cousin Henry IV, son of the Duke of Lancaster. This overthrow created a break in the line of succession that would later lead to war. The House of Lancaster ruled for over 60 years, until the turbulent reign of Henry VI, which was marked by growing civil discontent. When Henry VI suffered a mental breakdown, his cousin Richard, Duke of York, took control of the kingdom. Richard, as a descendant of both Clarence and York, felt his family deserved the throne, and when Henry VI tried to regain power, a series of bloody battles erupted. Richard, Duke of York, was killed at the battle of Wakefield, but just weeks later, his son took the throne as Edward IV. Edward’s marriage to the widow Elizabeth Woodville alienated many of his supporters, and for a brief time, Henry VI was restored to the throne. But following a battle in which Henry’s son was killed, Edward became king once again. Henry was imprisoned and later died mysteriously in the Tower of London. Shakespeare attributes his murder to Richard III.

Shakespeare’s play Richard III begins during the final months of Edward IV’s reign and concludes with the last major battle of the Wars of the Roses. At the Battle of Bosworth, a distant Lancastrian descendant, Henry Tudor, Earl of Richmond, defeated Richard III, became Henry VII, and established a new royal line: the House of Tudor.

The trial was a public spectacle as much as a legal proceeding. State of Tennessee vs. John Thomas Scopes was the first trial ever broadcast live via radio. Songs were written to commemorate the event. Souvenirs were sold. The courtroom was so packed with onlookers that the judge eventually ordered the trial to move outside to the courthouse lawn, fearing that the floor might collapse. The prosecution’s case was straightforward—Scopes never denied teaching evolution. The defense tried to have the Butler Act declared unconstitutional, arguing that it gave preference to a particular religious group. The defense also attempted to present evidence supporting the “truth” of evolution, arguing that “the State may determine what subjects shall be taught, but if biology is to be taught, it cannot be demanded that it be taught falsely.”

In Inherit the Wind, teacher Bertram Cates wins a clear moral and popular victory. The impact of the real Scopes Trial was more complicated, and in the end, both sides felt they had won. Bryan’s stumbles on the witness stand turned public opinion against him and his position, although his testimony had no bearing on the ultimate verdict: John Scopes was found guilty of a misdemeanor and fined $100. The Butler Act was not brought before the Supreme Court as a result of the Scopes Trial, and the ban on teaching evolution stood on the books in Tennessee until 1964. In the years following the Scopes Trial, anti-evolution laws failed to pass in 13 other states—only Arkansas and Mississippi passed similar bans. But the polarization between fundamentalists and modernists continued to grow, the widening gap between them only getting worse as the years went on.

“In the 30 years since [Bryan and Darrow] clashed at the Rhea County Courthouse,” wrote Lawrence and Lee, “the issues of their conflict have acquired new dimension and meaning.” A similar statement could be made about the 60 years that have passed since Lawrence and Lee wrote Inherit the Wind. The issues raised by the Scopes Trial have not been put to rest. The question of the origins of human life still polarizes Americans today—and the battle continues, fought on the field of our nation’s classrooms.

Six movies for PBS’s “American Playhouse.” Awards: 2008 Theatre Hall of Fame Inductee, 2005 John Houseman Award, ArtServe Michigan 2008 International Achievement Award, Honorary Doctorate, University of Michigan. Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters, University of San Diego. Film (actor): Sex and the City 2.

CRAIG NOEL (Founding Director) was first appointed director in 1939, directing 15 productions prior to World War II. Since then he directed more than 200 plays of all styles and periods and produced an additional 270 productions. His vision for The Old Globe resulted in the establishment of the Shakespeare Festival and the San Diego Junior Theatre in the late ’40s, the expansion to two theatres in the ’50s, Globe Educational Tours in the ’70s and Teatro Meta and the Old Globe/University of San Diego MFA program in the ’80s. During the 1940s, Mr. Noel served as dialogue director for the 20th Century Fox Studios and was the former director of the Ernie Pyle Theatre in Tokyo. Described by Variety as the eminence grise of San Diego theatre, Mr. Noel is one of the few San Diegans to have had an entire year (1987) proclaimed in his honor, and to be named one of San Diego’s “Living Treasures.” He was a founder of the California Theatre Council and a former vice president of the California Confederation of the Arts. His numerous honors include the San Diego Union-Tribune list of 25 persons who shaped the city’s history; the Governor’s Award for the Arts; University of Arizona Alumni Association’s Outstanding Citizen, for his contribution to their Fine Arts department; San Diego State University’s Outstanding Alumnus; Conservator of American Arts Award from American Conservatory Theater; the San Diego Press Club Headliner Award; San Diego Gentleman of Distinction Award; and a combined tribute from the Public Arts Advisory Council and the San Diego County Board of Supervisors. Mr. Noel was particularly proud of the following three honors representing education and theatre: Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters, University of San Diego, Honorary Doctorate in Fine Arts, San Diego State University and the annual Awards for Excellence in Theatre named in his honor by the San Diego Theatre Critics Circle. In 2007, he received the National Medal of Arts — the nation’s highest honor for artistic excellence — in a ceremony at the White House. Craig Noel died on April 3, 2010 at the age of 94.

Public Support

Major funding provided by the City of San Diego Commission for Arts and Culture. The Old Globe is funded by the County of San Diego.
What is the Craig Noel League?
Founded in 2000 and named for the Globe’s Founding Director, the League is a planned giving society for the Globe comprised of individuals who have included The Old Globe in their estate plans. Through their generosity, these supporters of the Theatre are helping to ensure a long and bright future for San Diego’s leading cultural landmark.

What is a Planned Gift?
Planned giving is simply a way to support The Old Globe through your estate plans by establishing an irrevocable bequest of property, stock or cash; a charitable trust; or some other deferred giving instrument. In your estate plans, you have the ability to designate the specific use of the funds given to the Globe, and to help guide your decision, The Old Globe Board of Directors has established specific giving areas that you may choose from, including classical theatre and Shakespeare, education programs and new works.

To become a member of the Craig Noel League or to tell us of a gift you have already made, please contact Bridget Cantu Wear, Associate Director of Development, Planned Giving, at (619) 231-1941 x2312 or bcantuwear@TheOldGlobe.org.
