Welcome to the World Premiere production of The Recommendation, which marks the professional debut of an exciting new playwright, Jonathan Caren. A recent graduate of The Juilliard School, Caren has crafted a witty and brutal script that takes a searing look at class and race in contemporary American society. This is also the Globe premiere for director Jonathan Munby and a powerful group of actors — Jimonn Cole, Brandon Gill and Evan Todd — who have created a forceful, dynamic first production for this hard-hitting new play. The Old Globe is proud to be launching this piece and introducing Caren’s work to our audiences.

As you may have heard, we have recently announced our summer season for 2012. We are pleased to welcome Adrian Noble back to The Old Globe as the Artistic Director of our 2012 Summer Shakespeare Festival. Adrian will be directing Shakespeare’s romantic romp As You Like It as well as the great American classic Inherit the Wind, which tackles the perennial struggle between faith and science. Adrian will be joined by renowned director Lindsay Posner, who will helm our production of Shakespeare’s Richard III. The summer season will also feature Michael Kramer’s Divine Rivalry, the true story of a painting competition between two of history’s greatest artists — Michelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci — orchestrated by one of history’s greatest masterminds, Niccolò Machiavelli. Michael Wilson will direct. Rounding out the summer is Yasmina Reza’s Tony Award-winning comedy God of Carnage, directed by our own Richard Seer.

We hope to see you often at The Old Globe in 2012.

The start of another year is a time for resolutions: commitments to try something new or to return to honored values. At The Old Globe, the board and staff are making resolutions, too, as we challenge ourselves with ambitious financial and artistic goals.

The Globe's mission statement, established years ago by Founding Director Craig Noel and Artistic Director Emeritus Jack O'Brien, charges us with “preserving, strengthening and advancing American theatre through a commitment to ensuring diversity and balance in programming.” One of our resolutions is to recommit to this mission in the plays we present on our stages.

Kicking off the winter season, the Globe presents two vastly different productions reflecting our commitment to programming balance. On the Globe’s Shiley Stage is a traditional Broadway play: the West Coast Premiere of Horton Foote’s Dividing the Estate. In the White Theatre is a World Premiere from a new voice in the American theatre: Jonathan Caren’s The Recommendation. The Globe’s tagline of “Broadway’s Best and San Diego’s Finest” is aptly represented by both productions you are about to experience in the Conrad Prebys Theatre Center.

We hope that one of your own resolutions is to stay a part of the Globe family as subscribers and donors in 2012. Warm wishes for a happy New Year!

Sincerely,
Harold W. Fuson, Jr.

“The right recommendation can change your life,” says the narrator of Jonathan Caren’s sharp, funny and socially critical new play, The Recommendation. Caren follows three very different characters — white, privileged Aaron Feldman; first-generation American Iskinder Ludoku; and second-strike criminal Dwight Barnes — as they struggle with power and friendship on the uneven playing field of the American class system.

Class, as sociologists see it, is commonly described as the intersection between education, income, occupation and net wealth. But class as we live and experience it can be a difficult subject to discuss, especially in a culture that prides itself on equal opportunity and the American Dream, that perennial promise that hard work can breed success regardless of origins or obstacles. Indeed, looking at the most recent Forbes 400 (the magazine’s list of the wealthiest people in America), only 30% of the wealthiest Americans inherited their fortunes. Those who do not come from great wealth can still make great fortunes in America. But, as The Recommendation explores, parents with money, education and connections give their children a hefty leg up on the ladder to success.

For the poorest Americans, income mobility seems to be shrinking. According to data from the University of Michigan’s Panel Study of Income Dynamics, a national socioeconomic study that began in 1968, it is getting more difficult for the poorest Americans to move up the ladder—and that struggle is even harder for African Americans. One recent analysis of the study data by Katharine Bradbury and Jane Katz showed that over a 10 year time span, 40% of white families who started in the poorest 10% of Americans remained in that group, while over 70% of black families who started in the poorest 10% were still there 10 years later.

The statistics when it comes to employment are equally alarming. Since the 1970s, the percentage of low-wage, low-benefit workers in the American economy has grown dramatically, and African Americans are much more likely to remain in those positions for their entire careers. The National Bureau of Economic Research published a study in 2004 exposing that even having a “black-sounding” name was enough to reduce job prospects when applicants respond to classified ads. In their publication Are Emily and Greg More Employable than Lakisha and Jamal?, the NBER shared their findings that identical resumes sent out under different names got significantly different responses. Resumes identified with a “white” name like Carrie or Kristin got called back by employers 13% of the time, while the same resume submitted under “black” names like Aisha, Keisha and Tamika had only a 2 to 5% callback rate. When higher qualifications were added to the resumes, a white name yielded as many more callbacks as an additional eight years of experience.

A related study conducted in 2002 by Princeton sociologist Devah Pager explored the impact of a criminal record on employment opportunities. She sent two teams of job seekers into the field armed with identical qualifications, except that one member of each team admitted to a felony drug conviction and 18 months in prison. One team was white, the other black. As expected, the criminal record decreased the number of employer callbacks in each team, but the surprise result of the study was the difference that race made in the equation. White applicants got called back 34% of the time; the number shrank to 17% if they had a criminal record. For black applicants with no criminal record, the callback rate was just 14%, with a drop to 5% if they put a felony conviction on their application. Pager repeated the study in both Minneapolis and New York City with similar results.

This is the playing field on which Jonathan Caren’s characters form alliances, compete against one another and fight to get ahead. Iskinder, the son of an African immigrant father and a white mother, succeeds in making it to an Ivy League school. There he meets Aaron Feldman, whom Iskinder describes as “smart, privileged and white as the sky is when you die.” Aaron is not just privileged—he is a born salesman, skilled at using his father’s connections to get what he wants and unafraid to use those connections to help his friends as well.

If the statistics hold true, Iskinder would need eight years of additional experience (or a felony conviction on Aaron’s part) to stand on level ground with Aaron when it comes to employment opportunities or to have a shot of matching Aaron in terms of income. But the truth is, Aaron isn’t even playing by those rules. Once the young men are out of school, Aaron does not even have to apply for jobs on the open market. Why? He has the all-important golden ticket: powerful recommendations from powerful people.

It’s no secret that many jobs aren’t filled by mailed-in resumes. Many jobs aren’t advertised at all. As the saying goes, “It’s not what you know, it’s who you know.” Who does Aaron know? Teachers at exclusive prep schools, high-profile entertainment lawyers and famous celebrities. Who does Iskinder know? Aaron. Throughout The Recommendation, Iskinder finds himself torn between the world of his father, who tells him, “Do not spy with avaricious eyes,” and Aaron’s world. One word from Aaron’s father gets Iskinder into law school at UCLA, and one swipe of Aaron’s credit card gets Iskinder the clothes he needs to become the man he wants to be. As a basis for a friendship, the gaps of class, race and opportunity between the two men make for dangerous, shifting ground.

Caren’s twist is finding a way to put Aaron in a place where all his connections and all his privilege mean nothing, where someone else holds all the cards. That place is a Hollywood jail, and that person is Dwight Barnes. In many ways a mirror of Aaron, Dwight is to the California Prison System what Aaron is to Brown University. “You got any friends in this piece?” Dwight asks Aaron. “You got to have friends.” Dwight has everything Aaron needs behind bars – the knowledge, the connections – and Aaron has everything Dwight needs on the outside. With one promise – “You scratch my back and I’ll scratch yours” – Aaron makes a deal with Dwight that will forever change his relationship with Iskinder.

While Aaron is being locked away in jail, Iskinder is sitting in a lawn chair, dreaming. “It’s the one,” he says, “where I’m climbing this ladder, away from my father.” That dream is the American Dream: finding some way to climb the ladder of class, status and wealth and possibly leaving your family, your friends, even yourself behind.

ARE THERE PEOPLE OR EXPERIENCES IN YOUR OWN BACKGROUND THAT INFORMED THE CHARACTERS AND THE STORY OF THE RECOMMENDATION?

The Recommendation was born out of a series of conversations with a friend, Amdie, who lost his job at a large midtown firm during the financial crisis and went to work pro bono as a public defender on Staten Island. I was inspired by his willingness to put his ego aside and help those who, guilty or not, were in no financial position to afford outside legal defense. In taking that job, my friend found himself caught between two staunchly contrasting worlds, and reflecting on that particular set of circumstances in and of itself was the genesis for the idea. I grew up in L.A. and went to a public school with kids who fit a whole spectrum of backgrounds. The characters and experiences in the play are a combination of both the stories I’ve heard and the people I knew growing up, though I can’t say any character is based on one person in particular. And of course the conversations and insights I owe to my friend.

THE PLAY SEEMS, AT ITS HEART, TO BE ISKINDER’S STORY. HOW WOULD YOU DESCRIBE WHAT MOTIVATES HIM AND WHAT CHANGES HE GOES THROUGH AS THE PLAY PROGRESSES?

I think it’s Iskinder’s story, but it’s somewhat deceptive because he’s an antihero. Like many good-natured, liberal people, Iskinder feels a need to give back to the world, considering the good fortune he’s been blessed with. But he is seduced by the opportunities provided by Aaron Feldman, who takes him off his initial track. The only way for Iskinder to justify his newfound position in the world is by retaining what little morality he has left, and in his mind that means helping Dwight Barnes.

YOU’RE EXPLORING THE CLOSELY INTERTWINED ISSUES OF CLASS AND RACE IN THE RECOMMENDATION. TWO BIG, POTENTIALLY CONTROVERSIAL TOPICS. WAS THERE A PARTICULAR ANGLE ON THOSE ISSUES THAT YOU WANTED TO PURSUE?

I didn’t start with the intent of writing about class and race. At first, it was an experiment to see what happened when two characters from opposing backgrounds were put in a confined space and forced to get to know each other. I found the stark situation so rife with misunderstanding I started mining it for humor. But I almost didn’t write the play because I thought, given my race, “Who am I to speak for these characters?” In a way, I thought Dwight could be cast color-blind, but something interesting does happen when he’s black, and that is a kind of kinship based on class but race. Again, it was my friend Amdie who propped me up and inspired me to explore these issues with his insight and perspective. More than anything while writing the play, I came to realize I was exploring a generally veiled hypocrisy of the middle class: we are quick to condemn the rich, yet many of us are willing to do anything to become them at the same time. I should probably put this in the first person and say that this play was an awakening of that in myself. That is Iskinder’s unconscious dilemma in The Recommendation.

ONE OF THE INTERESTING ASPECTS OF THE RECOMMENDATION IS THAT IT EXPLORES CLASS AND RACE THROUGH THE EXPERIENCES OF YOUNG PEOPLE, PARTICULARLY PEOPLE IN THEIR TWENTIES. HOW WOULD YOU DESCRIBE THE IMPACT OF THOSE ISSUES ON THAT GENERATION—PERSONALLY, PROFESSIONALLY AND IN TERMS OF RELATIONSHIPS?

I recently read a piece in The New York Times by William Deresiewicz called “Generation Sell” that tried to define our generation as one of self-branding entrepreneurs, and I thought it was spot on. We’ve commodified friendships out of necessity and survival. There are those who can help and those who cannot, and I don’t always share moral viewpoints with the former. The article presses on further to say that our generation doesn’t want to take a stand or step on any toes because as salespeople, we can’t afford to lose our customers. It’s kind of a sad realization and state of affairs in America that has made me try to be more self-aware about whom I befriend and why. It’s also why modern friendship is more complex than ever and why friendship and class become progressively harder to balance without harboring both guilt for what we have or resentment for that which we lack.

He was also an adjunct faculty member of the Music Department at the University of San Diego. Mr. Murphy earned his B.F.A. degree in Stage Management from Webster University in St. Louis, Missouri and his M.F.A. in Performing Arts Management from Brooklyn College of the City University of New York.

JACK O’BRIEN (Artistic Director Emeritus) served as the Artistic Director of The Old Globe from 1982 through 2007. Broadway: Catch Me If You Can, Impressionism, The Coast of Utopia (Tony Award), Dr. Seuss’ How the Grinch Stole Christmas!, Dirty Rotten Scoundrels (Tony nomination), Henry IV (Tony Award), Hairspray (Tony Award), Imaginary Friends, The Invention of Love (Tony nomination, Drama Desk Award), The Full Monty (Tony nomination), More to Love, Getting Away with Murder, Pride’s Crossing, The Little Foxes, Hapgood (Lucille Lortel Award, Best Director), Damn Yankees, Two Shakespearean Actors (Tony nomination), Porgy and Bess (Tony Award). Metropolitan Opera: Il Trittico, London: Love Never Dies, Hairspray (Olivier nomination), National Theatre: His Girl Friday. Six movies for PBS’s “American Playhouse.” Awards: 2008 Theatre Hall of Fame Inductee, 2005 John Houseman Award, ArtServe Michigan 2008 International Achievement Award, Honorary Doctorate, University of Michigan. Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters, University of San Diego. Film (actor): Sex and the City 2.

CRAIG NOEL (Founding Director) was first appointed director in 1939, directing 15 productions prior to World War II. Since then he directed more than 200 plays of all styles and periods and produced an additional 270 productions. His vision for The Old Globe resulted in the establishment of the Shakespeare Festival and the San Diego Junior Theatre in the late 1940s, the expansion to two theatres in the 1950s, Globe Educational Tours in the 1970s and Teatro Meta and the Old Globe/University of San Diego MFA program in the 1980s. During the 1940s, Mr. Noel served as dialogue director for the 20th Century Fox Studios and was the former director of the Ernie Pyle Theatre in Tokyo. Described by Variety as the eminence grise of San Diego theatre, Mr. Noel is one of the few San Diegans to have had an entire year (1987) proclaimed in his honor, and to be named one of San Diego’s “Living Treasures.” He was a founder of the California Theatre Council and a former vice president of the California Confederation of the Arts. His numerous honors include The San Diego Union-Tribune list of 25 persons who shaped the city’s history; the Governor’s Award for the Arts; University of Arizona Alumni Association’s Outstanding Citizen, for his contribution to their Fine Arts department; San Diego State University’s Outstanding Alumnus; Conservator of American Arts Award from American Conservatory Theater; the San Diego Press Club Headliner Award; San Diego Gentleman of Distinction Award; and a combined tribute from the Public Arts Advisory Council and the San Diego County Board of Supervisors. Mr. Noel was particularly proud of the following three honors representing education and theatre: Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters, University of San Diego, Honorary Doctorate in Fine Arts, San Diego State University and the annual Awards for Excellence in Theatre named in his honor by the San Diego Theatre Critics Circle. In 2007, he received the National Medal of Arts - the nation’s highest honor for artistic excellence - in a ceremony at the White House. Craig Noel died on April 3, 2010 at the age of 94.

The City of San Diego Supports Arts and Culture

The Old Globe appreciates the City of San Diego’s investment in arts and culture, fostering a vibrant community that supports creativity and innovation. The Commission’s vision for a vibrant and successful San Diego recognizes arts and culture as a major factor in improving the local economy while enhancing the quality of life for both residents and visitors. Audiences of The Recommendation may be interested in learning more about the Commission for Arts and Culture’s Diversity Initiative, a multi-year, multi-dimensional project launched in 2003 to foster a diverse, inclusive arts and culture community in San Diego.

City funding for arts and culture is provided through the Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) paid by tourists visiting San Diego. The City allocates slightly less than 0.5% of total TOT proceeds to the Commission for Arts and Culture, which provides financial support to more than 100 arts and culture organizations, including The Old Globe, through a rigorous application process. In 2010 TOT, funding of $6.4 million was matched by $77.8 million in earned revenue and $81.8 million in contributed revenue. San Diego’s arts and culture nonprofits represent a multi-million-dollar industry that added more than $173 million in direct expenditures to the local economy, including $98.8 million in salaries. In addition, spending by the nearly 1.5 million visitors to San Diego who participated in City-funded arts and cultural events also boosted the local economy.

In the summer of 2012 high school-aged actors and actresses are provided a unique and exciting opportunity to refine their skills and perform at The Old Globe. The Globe is committed to offering top-notch training to the next generation of actors, and the Summer Shakespeare Intensive is a great example of that mission.

Over the course of four weeks in the summer, the students rehearse with professional directors and participate in fantastic workshops with cast members from the Globe’s Summer Shakespeare Festival repertory company. The program culminates in a public performance of condensed versions of two of Shakespeare’s plays in the outdoor Lowell Davies Festival Theatre.

Auditions will be held in March 2012 (dates TBA).

SUMMER SHAKESPEARE INTENSIVE

MIDDLE SCHOOL SUMMER CONSERVATORY

Middle school-aged students spend three weeks in intensive training in our Middle School Summer Conservatory. Students in grades 6, 7, and 8 study with professional actors from our Summer Shakespeare Festival repertory company, focusing on sharpening their acting skills and gaining an understanding of the workings of a professional theatre. In addition to their acting training, these students will tour our theatres and meet staff from the costume, scenic, properties, sound and lighting departments. The program culminates in a showcase for an invited audience.

The Old Globe's ability to maintain the highest standard of excellence, while keeping ticket prices affordable, is due in large part to the financial support of more than 2,000 individuals, businesses, foundations and government agencies. Please join us in giving a warm thanks and recognition to these leaders who have made tonight and our 629 other performances possible. The Old Globe appreciates the support of those who have stepped into the spotlight.

A Planned Gift Ensures a Strong Tomorrow for The Old Globe

What is the Craig Noel League? Founded in 2000 and named for the Globe’s Founding Director, the League is a planned giving society for the Globe comprised of individuals who have included The Old Globe in their estate plans. Through their generosity, these supporters of the Theatre are helping to ensure a long and bright future for San Diego’s leading cultural landmark.

What is a Planned Gift? Planned giving is simply a way to support The Old Globe through your estate plans by establishing an irrevocable bequest of property, stock or cash; a charitable trust; a living estate; or some other deferred giving instrument. In your estate plans, you have the ability to designate the specific use of the funds given to the Globe, and to help guide your decision, The Old Globe Board of Directors has established specific giving areas that you may choose from, including classical theatre and Shakespeare, education programs and new works.

How do I make a Planned Gift? Simply call the Globe and schedule an appointment for a confidential meeting, or visit with your estate planner or attorney.

Join us and become a part of our active community with a variety of exciting events including an Annual Member Event, “Food for Thought” monthly lunches where you may dine with a Globe artist or attend one of the many Opening Night receptions held throughout the year.

To become a member of the Craig Noel League or to tell us of a gift you have already made, please contact Bridget Cantu Wear, Associate Director of Development, Planned Giving, at (619) 231-1941 x2312 or bcantuwear@TheOldGlobe.org.

Globe Ambassadors

Globe Ambassadors are generous supporters of The Old Globe who contribute a minimum of $3,500 to the Annual Fund, attend special Globe meetings and activities and serve as advocates in the community for the Globe’s mission and goals. As a group, Ambassadors sponsor one Globe production each season.
