Welcome to The Old Globe

The Scottsboro Boys is one of the most celebrated and daring musicals of the decade, and The Old Globe is proud to bring it to San Diego audiences in its West Coast premiere. We also welcome acclaimed director and choreographer Susan Stroman, who created the original Broadway production—The Scottsboro Boys marks her Globe debut. The production follows the true story of nine young African American men falsely accused of a terrible crime. Their shockingly unjust trials sparked nationwide protests and helped set the stage for the Civil Rights Movement. We hope you’ll explore this real-life drama even further through the information in this program and on our website. The Scottsboro Boys was nominated for 12 Tony Awards, and it has inspired and galvanized its audiences, reminding us all of a chapter in American history that should never be forgotten.

Just across Copley Plaza in the Sheryl and Harvey White Theatre, The Old Globe is offering another musical, the world premiere of Itamar Moses and Gaby Alter’s Nobody Loves You. We hope to see you back this summer for our 2012 Summer Shakespeare Festival. Under Shakespeare Festival Artistic Director Adrian Noble, this outdoor favorite features Richard III, As You Like It and Inherit the Wind in the Lowell Davies Festival Theatre. The summer season will also feature Michael Kramer’s Divine Rivalry as well as Yasmina Reza’s Tony Award-winning comedy God of Carnage. As always, we thank you for your support as we continue our mission to bring San Diego audiences the very best theatre, both classical and contemporary.

The Scottsboro Boys

AN AMERICAN LEGACY

One beautiful but chilly spring morning in 1931, nine young African American men, ages 13 to 19, boarded a boxcar heading through the northeast corner of Alabama. Like thousands of young men and women, they were looking for work, a new life, something to do. Before the day was over, the nine would be accused of a crime they never committed.

The trials that followed would divide the nation along racial, political and geographic lines and become a turning point for the emerging Civil Rights Movement. But beneath it all was the story of nine young men, reluctantly drawn into the national spotlight, desperate to prove to themselves that they mattered. Not until 1976, when Alabama Governor George Wallace pardoned the last living Scottsboro Boy, would they finally be exonerated. After 45 years, the case had come to a close.

In its wake, the story of the Scottsboro Boys changed America. During the first flush of public outcry, demonstrations in support of the teens spread like wildfire across the north. Following the first verdict, over 300,000 black and white workers gathered to protest the convictions in 110 American cities. Crowds in New York, fueled by the passions of the emerging Communist Party, reached 10,000 in Union Square alone.

The ongoing trials brought changes to the legal system as well. The Supreme Court reversed the convictions for two of the trials. In 1932, the verdict was overturned because Alabama had failed to provide adequate assistance of counsel as required by the 14th Amendment. In 1935, the conviction was reversed again because African Americans had been excluded from sitting on the juries in the trials.

But the Scottsboro Boys changed lives in smaller, more personal ways. Take the story of Rosa McCauley, who, in 1931, marched to free the Scottsboro Boys. At a rally sponsored by the NAACP, the young 19-year-old met Raymond Parks. A year later they married, and together, Raymond and Rosa Parks continued the fight against injustice.

It’s essential to bring the Scottsboro Boys back into the national conversation about race. Nine lives were destroyed. Nine lives that matter every bit as much now as then.

“The lesson to black people, to my children, to everybody, is that you should always fight for your rights, even if it costs you your life. Stand up for your rights, even if it kills you. That’s all life consists of.” – Clarence Norris, 1976

As San Diego’s largest not-for-profit performing arts organization, The Old Globe’s operating budget of $20 million sustains year-round productions on three stages, an audience of more than 250,000, education and community programs serving nearly 50,000 and artistic development programs designed to advance the future of American theatre.

As you know, charitable support through grants and contributions is vital to sustaining these activities, and one of the most vital funding sources for The Old Globe is the City of San Diego’s Commission for Arts and Culture, which, through an arduous vetting process, allocates contracts for services provided. Funding comes through the transient occupancy tax (TOT), which is paid by tourists who stay at hotels and not by local citizens. The goal of the Commission is to fund organizations that stimulate the economy, attract tourism, reflect the diversity of our region and improve the quality of life for San Diegans.

With each annual budget cycle, funding for the Commission is at risk. We encourage you, as Globe supporters, to tell City Councilmembers and the Mayor that you value programs supported by the Commission and that you advocate for keeping Commission funding as a high priority.

If you are interested in learning more about public funding and how it impacts Globe programs, please contact the Development Department. Thank you for all you do as advocates and friends. We greatly appreciate it.

Enjoy the performance.

Sincerely,

Harold W. Fuson, Jr.

Education Sponsor

“Charitable giving and volunteering is more than just an opportunity to share with others,” says Dean Thorp, Senior Vice President of the Wells Fargo Foundation. “It’s an opportunity to build a network that will have a role in San Diego’s future. It’s a chance to be a part of what’s happening in this wonderful city.” In the past year, the Wells Fargo Foundation donated $2.2 million to nearly 500 non-profits and schools in San Diego County. Not only does the Foundation make regular donations to the Globe’s Annual Fund and educational programming, but Thorp is now serving his third term on the Globe’s Board of Directors. Friends like the Wells Fargo Foundation help to ensure that the Globe will continue to serve the San Diego community for years to come.

A NOTE FROM JOHN KANDER

Nearly every musical I have ever written started as an idea around Fred Ebb's kitchen table. The Scottsboro Boys is no different. One morning in 2002, Susan Stroman, David Thompson, Fred Ebb and I were gathered around Fred's table, eager to start a new project. One of us proposed an idea: what if we were to write a musical about a true story – one based on an important chapter in American history.

In order to find inspiration, we turned to the landmark court trials of the 20th century. Immediately, the case that jumped out at us was the story of the Scottsboro Boys. As a young boy growing up in Kansas City, I remember when the Scottsboro Boys were first in the headlines. I remember the conversations with my parents about what the trials meant. I am sure there were similar conversations at kitchen tables across the country. I also remember when the headlines began to fade and the Scottsboro Boys gradually disappeared from the national spotlight.

As we began to write The Scottsboro Boys, it was immediately apparent why it was so important to tell their story. Behind the headlines, the spectacle, the ongoing trials and the histrionics of politicians and lawyers was the story of nine young African American boys determined to prove that they mattered. And as collaborators, our kitchen table conversations continued: how was it possible that a group of innocent boys could be destroyed by a single lie? Why was it easier to believe that lie than it was to accept the truth?

The Scottsboro Boys is a story that still resonates today as we struggle to give voice to those who are marginalized or disenfranchised. I remember how much the story touched me as a young boy growing up in Kansas City. And it touches me even more today. Writing The Scottsboro Boys has been one of the most rewarding experiences of my career. I am eager for you to join us and become part of a conversation that I know you will take back to your own kitchen table.
Profiles of Innocence

“I don’t tell people stories. I tell the truth.” – Haywood Patterson

Haywood Patterson, Clarence Norris, Ozie Powell, Olen Montgomery, Willie Roberson, Charles Weems, Eugene Williams, Andy Wright and Roy Wright and photos courtesy of Alabama State Archives/Montgomery Archives; The Morgan County Archives.

Haywood Patterson, started riding the rails when he was 14. Patterson entered jail illiterate. “I held a pencil in my hand but I couldn’t tap the power that was in it.” But Patterson was a quick learner. “By the end of 1931, I got much confidence in my way with words, so I prepared a Christmas gift for my mother, a letter by my own hand.”

Clarence Norris, the second of 11 children, was put to work in the cotton fields at the age of seven. After his father died, Norris took a job at the local Goodyear plant, working up to 16 hours a day. But the job ended, and Norris decided to hit the railroad tracks and look for work.

Ozie Powell, according to his own testimony during the first trial, only had three months of formal education. When he was 14, Powell left home. He worked in lumber camps and sawmills for weeks or months at a time before moving on.

Olen Montgomery, was born in Monroe, Georgia. Extremely myopic and with a cataract in one eye, Montgomery could not see well at all. The pair of glasses he had was broken on the day of the arrest and he went for two years without a new pair.

Willie Roberson, was raised by his grandmother. When she died in 1930, Roberson left his job as a hotel busboy in Georgia to go to Chattanooga in search of work. Finding none available, he boarded a freight for Memphis in search of free medical care to treat an advanced case of syphilis.

Charles Weems, was only four when his mother died. Six of his seven siblings died soon afterwards. When his father fell ill, Weems was sent to live with his aunt Gussie McElroy. He was on his way home to Tennessee when he was pulled from the Southern Railroad and charged with rape.

Eugene Williams, was 13 at the time of his arrest and was the youngest of the Scottsboro Boys. Williams was convicted in a speedy trial at Scottsboro with the other boys, but the Supreme Court of Alabama struck down his conviction based on his young age.

Andy Wright, left his native Chattanooga on a Southern Railroad freight train headed for Alabama, accompanied by his younger brother, Roy. Andy was 19 at the time and had had enough schooling that he could read and write a bit.

Roy Wright, left home for the first time at the age of 13 to look for work with his older brother, Andy. Roy was one of the few boys who knew how to write.

“We have been sentenced to die for something we ain’t never done. Us poor boys been sentenced to burn up in the electric chair for the reason that we is workers – and the color of our skin is black.” – Roy Wright

An American Art Form

Minstrelsy is a uniquely American art form, built on racial stereotypes and blind bigotry. In the 1930s, when the Scottsboro trials took place, the minstrel show was considered mainstream entertainment, especially in the South.

The Scottsboro Boys uses the free-for-all atmosphere of the minstrel show to provide a fitting backdrop for the racially charged media and legal circuses that surrounded the real Scottsboro Boys trials. The American Historical Review wrote that the rhetoric of the Scottsboro case was “deeply entrenched in the racial stereotypes derived from the legacy of minstrelsy in American culture.”

For nearly 100 years, the minstrel show was one of America’s most popular forms of entertainment. It emerged in the 1840s, reaching the peak of popularity around the Civil War, but continuing well into the mid-20th century. It was one of the primary sources for popular music, introducing such songs as “Oh! Susanna,” “Camptown Races” and “My Old Kentucky Home.”

Over the years, the form evolved, adapting to local traditions, geography and prevailing tastes. Traditionally, the minstrel parade announced the arrival of the troupe in town. The troupe then led the audience into the theatre. The players arranged their chairs in a semicircle and the interlocutor began the action by grandly announcing, “Gentlemen, be seated!”

The interlocutor served as the Master of Ceremonies and called on the performers to tell their stories and sing their songs. The show also incorporated the antics of the two end men known as Mr. Tambo and Mr. Bones. The evening culminated in a grand production number – often the cakewalk.

By the mid-20th century, minstrel shows became a relic of the past, a reminder of the anguish and racism that inspired the American Civil Rights Movement.

NOTES ON THE SCORE

“ELECTRIC CHAIR”
Some of the boys were housed in Death Row, where the sounds of nightly executions haunted their dreams. The song “Electric Chair” is the nightmare of Eugene Williams, the youngest of the Scottsboro Boys.

“FINANCIAL ADVICE”
This song is directly inspired by an event that occurred during Haywood Patterson’s second trial in 1932. In the summation for the prosecution, assistant attorney Wade Wright asked the jury “whether justice in this case is going to be bought and sold with Jew money from New York.” Defense attorney Samuel Leibowitz called for a mistrial, which the judge refused to declare.

Full STEAM Ahead: ARTS EDUCATION Heats Up Science Learning

What do almost all Nobel Prize-winning scientists have in common? The arts. According to an article by Michele and Robert Root-Bernstein in Psychology Today, “almost all Nobel Laureates in the sciences actively engage in arts as adults. They are twenty-five times as likely as the average scientist to sing, dance, or act; seventeen times as likely to be a visual artist; twelve times more likely to write poetry and literature.... Many connect their art to their scientific ability with some riff on Nobel Prize-winning physicist Max Planck’s words: ‘The creative scientist needs an artistic imagination.’”

The recent emphasis on Science, Technology, Engineering and Math (STEM) in schools has become a clarion call by many in government. This STEM focus is intended to stimulate our economy and keep us ahead of the rest of the world when it comes to innovation and new technology. But when the focus is centered on STEM, other modes of learning are pushed to the side. Specifically, the arts are often cut from school curricula in order to make way for STEM courses.

Educators, parents, arts practitioners and businesspersons nationwide have rallied for a new cause: Replace STEM with STEAM. Adding the “A” (for Arts) to the mix powers us forward to reach the goals that STEM advocates seek. By providing rich arts training, students will develop the critical skills and creative thinking that allow for true innovation.

How can we know that the arts actually have an effect on student learning? Recently, Cal State San Marcos and the San Diego County Office of Education partnered on the DREAM project, a thorough study on improving reading scores. One group of teachers was given no additional training in how to use the arts in the classroom. The second group of teachers received only training and the third group received training plus each teacher was paired with a trained arts professional to incorporate the arts into their lessons.

The CSUSM study showed that the first group of children (no arts training for the teachers) had a fairly typical 25% increase in standardized test scores. The group whose teachers had some arts training gained a respectable 42% increase. But the children whose teachers had training plus the support of an arts professional increased their scores by an astonishing 87%. Practitioners in the arts education field were not surprised by the results. They have seen how the arts work in the classroom. They have seen children suddenly grasp a concept when presented with an arts-infused lesson on math or science. They have seen children focused and ready to learn after participating in an exhilarating theatre game or activity. They have seen bored and sullen students suddenly becoming engaged and enthusiastic learners when a lesson is taught through theatre.

Program co-director Merryl Goldberg noted that the study is remarkable for its scope, having been done in 10 schools. A study this thorough is rare, and the results have people taking notice. Researcher and program evaluator (and former Old Globe Education Director) Patti Saraniero, who compiled the data for the DREAM project, pointed out that the greatest gains were for the lowest performing students. Why is that important? Low-performing schools are often the first to lose their arts programs with administrators focusing on core curriculum and increasing standardized test scores. This study may help to guide administrators of low-performing schools in rethinking their approach when confronted with a mandate to increase test scores. The arts help children learn. And for some learners, the arts are crucial to the way they think.

The Old Globe’s Education Department works with schools countywide to bring quality arts programming to the classroom. Our on-site programs provide in-depth arts training to students who wish to study theatre. Only time will tell if these students will go on to be professional actors or Nobel Laureates, but one thing is sure: it’s full STEAM ahead for all students when the arts are included in the curriculum.

The finalists of the 2011 Globe Honors, the Globe’s annual competition recognizing excellence in high school theatre, warm up with accompanist Leigh Sutherlin.
The Old Globe’s ability to maintain the highest standard of excellence, while keeping ticket prices affordable, is due in large part to the financial support of more than 2,000 individuals, businesses, foundations and government agencies. Please join us in giving a warm thanks and recognition to these leaders who have made tonight and our 629 other performances possible. The Old Globe appreciates the support of those who have stepped into the spotlight.

A Planned Gift Ensures a Strong Tomorrow for The Old Globe

What is the Craig Noel League?
Founded in 2000 and named for the Globe’s Founding Director, the League is a planned giving society for the Globe comprised of individuals who have included The Old Globe in their estate plans. Through their generosity, these supporters of the Theatre are helping to ensure a long and bright future for San Diego’s leading cultural landmark.

What is a Planned Gift?
Planned giving is simply a way to support The Old Globe through your estate plans by establishing an irrevocable bequest of property, stock or cash; a charitable trust; a living estate; or some other deferred giving instrument. In your estate plans, you have the ability to designate the specific use of the funds given to the Globe, and to help guide your decision, The Old Globe Board of Directors has established specific giving areas that you may choose from, including classical theatre and Shakespeare, education programs and new works.

How do I make a Planned Gift?
Simply call the Globe and schedule an appointment for a confidential meeting, or visit with your estate planner or attorney.

Join us and become part of our active community with a variety of exciting events including an Annual Member Event, “Food for Thought” monthly lunches where you may dine with a Globe artist or attend one of the many Opening Night receptions held throughout the year.

To become a member of the Craig Noel League or to tell us of a gift you have already made, please contact Bridget Cantu Wear, Associate Director of Development, Planned Giving, at (619) 231-1941 x2312 or bcantuwear@TheOldGlobe.org.
