Welcome to The Royale! We’re proud to kick off our new season with some exciting new voices here at the Globe. This fall, across the plaza, Steve Martin and Edie Brickell are premiering their brand new musical Bright Star. And here in the Sheryl and Harvey White Theatre, we welcome playwright Marco Ramirez to The Old Globe for the first time. Marco is an accomplished screenwriter as well as a playwright, and you may already know his work from television shows such as “Orange is the New Black” and “Sons of Anarchy.” But The Royale is not like anything on television. It’s deeply and surprisingly theatrical, a story that demands to be told on the stage.

For that very reason, we’re delighted to have placed the play in the hands of imaginative director Rachel Chavkin. The founding artistic director of her own company, the TEAM, Rachel has been blazing a name for herself on both sides of the Atlantic. Her ingenious, often immersive work (like the New York hit Natasha, Pierre and the Great Comet of 1812) has thrilled East Coast audiences for years, and it’s a coup for us to launch her West Coast career.

With The Royale, the Globe reinforces its commitment to nurturing the most exciting new talent, artists whose work has both style and substance, whose skills will both move you and knock your socks off. These artists are the future of American theatre, and we’re thrilled to have them at the Globe today.

MISSION STATEMENT

The mission of The Old Globe is to preserve, strengthen, and advance American theatre by: creating theatrical experiences of the highest professional standards; producing and presenting works of exceptional merit, designed to reach current and future audiences; ensuring diversity and balance in programming; providing an environment for the growth and education of theatre professionals, audiences, and the community at large.
For more than 20 years, U.S. Bank has been a stalwart supporter of The Old Globe’s artistic, education, and community programming, including The Grinch Literacy Initiatives for elementary school students in Title One schools, School in the Park, and Insights Seminars. Additionally, U.S. Bank has long been a production sponsor for many plays, including Sight Unseen, Robin and the 7 Hoods, Somewhere, Good People, and A Doll’s House. U.S. Bank’s philanthropy is found in priority areas of education, economic opportunity, and artistic and cultural enrichment. Music, art, sports, and educational opportunities all enrich a community, which is why U.S. Bancorp proudly supports many such organizations, which in turn strengthens communities and enhances the quality of life across America. The Old Globe thanks U.S. Bank for its generous and steadfast support.

MANDELL WEISS CHARITABLE TRUST

The Old Globe is grateful to Mandell Weiss Charitable Trust for supporting this production of The Royale. Mandell Weiss (1891-1993) was one of San Diego’s most successful entrepreneurs and a generous philanthropist. He first fell in love with the theatre as a teenager and, though his plans to pursue an acting career were interrupted by World War I, he later helped build San Diego’s vibrant and diverse theatre community through his generous contributions. His legacy continues today as the Mandell Weiss Charitable Trust provides grants to a variety of organizations throughout San Diego County. Since 1996, the Trust has annually sponsored many Globe productions and provided funding to support construction of the Sheryl and Harvey White Theatre in the Conrad Prebys Theatre Center.

THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE ARTS

SUPPORTING FREE STUDENT MATINEES AT THE GLOBE

The Old Globe is grateful to receive support from the National Endowment for the Arts for the Student Access to the Arts/Free Student Matinee Program. Each year, this program gives more than 3,500 students from throughout San Diego County opportunities to experience many of the same plays and musicals enjoyed by Globe patrons. During the 2014-2015 school year, students will enjoy performances of The Royale by Marco Ramirez; Bright Star, a world premiere musical by Edie Brickell and Steve Martin; the Old Globe/University of San Diego Graduate Theatre Program production of Shakespeare’s Pericles, Prince of Tyre; the annual holiday production of Dr. Seuss’ How the Grinch Stole Christmas!; and The White Snake, written and directed by Mary Zimmerman. The program also offers intensive pre-show workshops with Globe teaching artists to provide background information about the productions and help students build artistic literacy.

For information about how you can contribute matching funds to help support this vital program, contact Rico Zamora at (619) 231-1941 x2308.
Since the founding of The Old Globe in 1935, heroic leadership has made the theatre a cultural icon in San Diego and a forerunner in the American theatre. Many individuals have paved that way and enabled the theatre’s extraordinary success, and the Globe would like to recognize and honor its most generous and committed philanthropists who have helped make that possible.

The following individuals and organizations, recognized for their tremendous cumulative giving, comprise a special group of friends who have played leading “behind-the-scenes” roles, helping create the productions on the three stages, programs in the community, and our influence beyond this region.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF CITY OF SAN DIEGO COMMISSION FOR ARTS AND CULTURE APPOINTED

The Old Globe is pleased to welcome and congratulate Dana Springs to the position of executive director of the City of San Diego Commission for Arts and Culture. Springs was appointed in August by Mayor Kevin Faulconer following a national search and a competitive selection process. On staff at the Commission for 14 years, Springs served in progressively more responsible positions in the management of the Commission’s Public Art Program. Springs served more than a year as the Commission’s interim executive director following the retirement of Victoria Hamilton, who served 24 years at the helm. Springs holds a B.A. in Visual Art from UC San Diego and was named by San Diego Magazine as one of “50 People to Watch” in 2013.

The Royale brings to our stage an exciting, immersive look at a crucial moment in sports and American history. It also marks the Globe debuts of two artists—a playwright and a director—whose original visions are reshaping our national theatre culture. Great social issues explored in visceral and energetic theatrical forms by the country’s best artists: this is what The Old Globe delivers season after season.

As your Globe Board Chair and a firm believer in the restorative powers of the arts, I am pleased to represent and support this amazing institution alongside our valued sponsors: Mandell Weiss Charitable Trust and U.S. Bank. Show us your commitment—your philanthropy can make a difference. Your financial support of the Globe, San Diego’s largest not-for-profit performing arts organization, helps close the funding gap between the costs of presenting each show and ticket sales. And special thanks goes to those who guarantee the Globe’s future for years to come through endowments and Craig Noel League membership. We are grateful for our audiences and our supporters for everything you do, including purchasing tickets, attending performances, and spreading the word about our productions and education programs with your friends.

It’s our adventurous and open-minded audience that allows us to produce challenging and rewarding theatre that echoes forward from its place in time to our own era. We appreciate your joining us for the ride! Thank you for your presence and for all that you do for the Globe family.

Marco Ramirez’s play The Royale is a work of remarkable sophistication and technical accomplishment. I admire many things about it, but to me its particular boldness is its confidence with a technique that drama at its best loves to exploit: the weaving together of diametric opposites. In The Royale, the public and the private, the historical and the imagined, the intimate and the epic, the psychological and the mythic, commingle. The result dazzles.

The play’s hero, Jay “The Sport” Jackson, is based on a real man, Jack Johnson. He shattered boxing’s color barrier in 1908 when he won the World Heavyweight Championship. America wasn’t ready for what Johnson achieved, and his personal triumph unleashed public tragedy in the form of ferocious racial violence across the country. But Johnson persevered, fashioning for himself a public persona that courted controversy and willingly stoked the raging social fires of the day. The great documentarian Ken Burns chronicled Johnson in his film Unforgivable Blackness and captured his subject’s complexity, noting that in his heyday Johnson was “the most famous—and the most notorious—African American on Earth.”

Other writers have found creative inspiration in Johnson’s story, perhaps most famously the playwright Howard Sackler, whose 1967 work The Great White Hope saw in 1908’s black boxers parallels to the civil rights pioneers whose struggles roiled America as he wrote. But Sackler, like Burns, hews to Johnson’s life with an historian’s rigor. Ramirez is more freewheeling. He wants to transcend historical exactitude and imagine Johnson’s life neither as a diorama in the distant past nor as a symbol in the current moment. Ramirez’s Jay Jackson is smaller in scale than both of those things, and as a result, somehow bigger. Jay is a man, not a metaphor. And his humanity, the vulnerability beneath his muscle and force, touches us. It reminds us that history, that great tectonic force, is finally only individual people making individual choices, with incomplete information and among imperfect options.

In this sense Marco Ramirez as writer is heir to a true American giant: August Wilson. Not merely because both men explore the experiences of urban Americans of color, but because Wilson reads American history from the grassroots upward. For him, the African American story—the American story—is about simple individuals finding a way to do their best by making the best of what they have. Wilson’s heroes manage to build a family, a society, and, most of all, a self with little more than the strength of their own hands. Just like boxers. It’s a shame that Wilson never attempted a Jack Johnson play. It might have come out a lot like The Royale. He would have liked Ramirez, and his play.

The Globe is proud to give The Royale its second production, and to put our resources behind a play whose worthiness we believe earns it a place in the national repertoire. In so doing, we snatch Marco Ramirez temporarily from the clutches of television, where he’s thriving, and whisper to him, “Keep writing for the stage.” We know he will. We’re also proud to welcome director Rachel Chavkin to the West Coast. Her vision of a visceral and deeply physical theatre is a perfect complement to Ramirez’s and a true thrill to witness. Together these artists, along with their collaborators, have forged an event as exciting as the title fight it chronicles, and we know our audiences will cheer it.

Thanks for coming. Enjoy the show.

JACK JOHNSON

The Royale is loosely based on the life of boxer Jack Johnson, the first African American Heavyweight Champion of the World. The son of former slaves, Johnson lived and fought at the height of the Jim Crow era, a time when racial segregation was law for the South and common practice in the North, when lynchings and race riots routinely took the lives of black Americans across the country. But Johnson was ambitious and unapologetic, a huge personality both inside and outside the ring. He won the title of World Negro Heavyweight Champion in 1904, but his efforts to take on the white champion, Jim Jeffries, were met with scorn. “When there are no more white men left to fight, I will quit the business,” Jeffries said. Jeffries retired undefeated, and when a new champion emerged, Canadian Tommy Burns, Johnson pursued him for years, publically taunting him and campaigning hard for a match. In 1908, after promoters allegedly paid Burns $30,000 (close to a million dollars in today’s money), Johnson got his chance. In Sydney, Australia, he defeated Burns in 14 rounds. An immediate outcry against Johnson led to pleas for a “great white hope,” a white boxer who could reclaim the title. In 1910, former champ Jim Jeffries, who had refused to fight Johnson years before, came out of retirement to challenge him in what came to be known as “The Fight of the Century.” On the Fourth of July, during a match attended by over 20,000 spectators, in a special ring erected in downtown Reno, Johnson again emerged triumphant. It was more than a boxing victory; it was a major national event. Race riots erupted in more than 50 cities across the country in response—both celebrations and protests—during which 20 people were killed and hundreds more injured.

Months later, when a film of the bout was released, its exhibition was banned in many states. But Johnson’s title was confirmed and undeniable. After the fight, Johnson’s detractors looked for some way to take him down, if not in the ring, then in his personal life. Johnson dated white women and socialized with prostitutes, and that vulnerability led to him being targeted, prosecuted, and convicted under the Mann Act, a moral reform law. He was given the maximum sentence—over a year in prison—and the high-profile phase of his career came to an end. But Johnson’s enemies could not erase his victories. At a time in American history when sports were emerging as a major cultural force, Johnson arose as an icon: the most famous, most photographed, most written-about African American of his day.
MODELS OF RESISTANCE

In the early years of the 20th century, leaders in the African American community had conflicting ideas about how to address issues of racial inequality. Influential speaker and writer Booker T. Washington urged “accommodation,” a temporary acceptance of the status quo. He believed that by becoming skilled workers, indispensable to the economy, African Americans would gradually achieve respect and social rights. By 1903, historian and economist W.E.B. Du Bois was challenging Washington’s ideas.

Du Bois felt that Washington’s program of accommodation was hurting, rather than helping, the African American cause, and it was the duty of African Americans to oppose it. “We have no right to sit silently by,” Du Bois wrote, “while the inevitable seeds are sown for a harvest of disaster to our children, black and white.” In 1909, Du Bois’s more radical, activist spirit led him to become one of the founders of the NAACP. At stake in their debate was the very issue of how to achieve desperately needed change in the fabric of American law and culture. Their views divided African Americans in the early 20th century, but over time, Du Bois’s view achieved prominence.

As scholar Khalil Gibran Muhammad explains, “Du Bois saw that real change, fundamental change, living up to the real promise of racial democracy in America, depended upon agitation—depended upon a grab for power. He became the singular, towering intellectual figure of African American life in the twentieth century. He parlayed all [his skills and knowledge] to prove with the power of the pen and the power of the voice and the power of organizing that black people could and would transform this world—not just for black people, but for democracy.”

Jack Johnson may have broken the color line in heavyweight boxing in 1908, but segregation in sports would continue for decades, even in boxing. After Johnson lost the heavyweight title in 1915, African Americans were effectively shut out of the championship for another 22 years, until Joe Louis finally challenged for it—and won—in 1937. As professional sports grew in popularity in the first half of the 20th century, they developed a strong connection to colleges and universities—and to corporations—all of which were legally or effectively segregated. This left few opportunities for black athletes.

Organized baseball in the United States welcomed African American players until the late 1800s, when several prestigious players refused to play on or against teams that included blacks. Although the baseball leagues occasionally signed Native American and Cuban players, African Americans were banned until Jackie Robinson joined the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1945. Robinson paved the way for African American players in other sports, including Earl Lloyd, the first black player in the NBA. As with baseball, professional American football included black players at its inception in the 1920s, but it became all-white by 1933. The last NFL team to integrate, the Washington Redskins, didn’t include African Americans until 1962.

How would you describe The Royale?

RACHEL CHAVKIN: I’d start, first and foremost, by saying that it’s a play inspired by Jack Johnson, the black heavyweight boxer who broke the color barrier. It tells that story in a very intimate way; it feels like a chamber piece that’s written for four men. Then a woman steps in, suddenly, in scene five, and the play breaks open into something else.

MARCO RAMIREZ: I completely agree that the character of Nina breaks the play open. She should almost feel like the nanny in “Muppet Babies” (bear with me), in that she opens the door and finds all the male characters playing pretend. Boxing itself is a sort of pretend, because it’s staged conflict. She’s coming in and saying, “That’s cute, the fight you’re pretending to have, what about the real one, the one with no bells or water breaks?”

RC: When Nina appears, what at first appeared to be a historical look at an incredibly fascinating and charismatic sports figure becomes a wider piece about the cost to everyone else when someone breaks the color barrier.

MR: I didn’t really set out to tell Jack Johnson’s story, or even a story about American race relations. Really, I just wanted to write a play about boxing. I love the simplicity of it. The bare-bones nature of it. It’s an inherently dramatic sport, and stunningly theatrical. Two go in, one comes out. They have nothing more than their physical and emotional selves in that ring, and I love that. And fictionalizing it felt right because I knew I’d be taking liberties with the story. In order to make the storytelling as dynamic as I thought it could be, I knew I’d have to switch around the order of events, create entirely new ones, and ignore whole aspects of Jack Johnson’s real life. In an effort to not disrespect historians along the way, it just felt right to say this story felt Jack Johnson-adjacent, but not a traditional biographical piece by any means.

Rachel, what about the play drew you to it as a director?

RC: I’m a very political person, and the politics of the piece are both smart and ambiguous in a way I just thought was astonishing. Apart from that, the language is extraordinary. The first time I read the play, I think I read it in a single, hour-long shot. I just couldn’t stop reading because of the adrenaline of the language. Rather than seeing boxing presented in a literal way—which I often find to be disappointing on stage because you can’t actually have actors hitting each other—Marco has developed this incredible alternative language that lets you inside the minds of the boxers as they’re engaged in the fight. So automatically we have the playwright getting in the way of us being too literal, too representational.
The question for us was how to embrace that and let the playfulness of Marco’s writing sing while also making the story in the boxing ring clear.

Marco, what led you to approach the boxing in this less naturalistic way?

MR: I’m interested in what makes a piece of theatre worth seeing. It’s a live event, like a magic trick or a sporting event, and to treat it like it’s anything else is like ordering chicken fingers from a gourmet chef. There have been plenty of “realistic” depictions of boxers on film and TV, and so it was important for me to set this apart from all of those. With no disrespect intended to fight choreographers, I knew at the very beginning that I wanted the “fighting” in this play to be a character in itself, something unseen that could only be understood in person. I knew I was going to do the fighting-without-fighting boxing matches before I even knew the story of the play.

This is a piece with a historical setting, but how do you think it speaks to audiences today?

MR: I always intended the historical setting to feel contemporary. The lead character is as much Jack Johnson as he is Jay-Z. He’s bombastic and realizes the only way to get a seat at the table of high society is to take it. He will be remembered—whether the establishment likes it or not. It’s the very definition of swagger.

RC: I think it’s a terribly relevant piece today. If we don’t still face the color barrier of boxing, we face other color barriers—like the presidency of the United States. That’s a recent breakthrough, and it has by no means put an end to questions about the disparity between the rights and privileges of whites and blacks in this country. I think what this piece gets at is the kind of bravery and sheer willpower—and in Jack Johnson’s case, arrogance—that it takes to say, “I’m not going along with the status quo.” It raises the question of how passive we can be in the face of hatred and violence, and reminds us of the kind of willpower it takes to make change.

MR: Obviously, the racial dynamics are also still in play, but even beyond those, I think there are questions here about growth and progress. For some, it comes too slowly. It’s the stuff of MLK and Malcolm, of Professor X and Magneto. For me, The Royale is about a backroom conversation between a first black congressional candidate and his wife, or between a gay celebrity who hasn’t come out and her publicist. Progress is dangerous. Being a trailblazer puts a target on your back, but staying in the shadows? That can be worse.

- Marco Ramirez.

CRAIG NOEL
(Founding Director) was first appointed director in 1939, directing 15 productions prior to World War II. Since then he directed more than 200 plays of all styles and periods and produced an additional 270 productions. His vision for The Old Globe resulted in the establishment of the Shakespeare Festival and the San Diego Junior Theatre in the late ‘40s, the expansion to two theatres in the ‘50s, Globe Educational Tours in the ‘70s, and Teatro Meta and the Old Globe/University of San Diego Graduate Theatre Program in the ‘80s. During the 1940s, Mr. Noel served as dialogue director for the 20th Century Fox Studios and was the director of the Ernie Pyle Theatre in Tokyo. Described by Variety as the éminence grise of San Diego theatre, Mr. Noel is one of the few San Diegans to have had an entire year (1987) proclaimed in his honor, and to be named one of San Diego’s “Living Treasures.” He was a founder of the California Theatre Council and a former vice president of the California Confederation of the Arts. His numerous honors include the San Diego Union-Tribune list of 25 persons who shaped the city’s history; the Governor’s Award for the Arts; University of Arizona Alumni Association’s Outstanding Citizen, for his contribution to their Fine Arts department; San Diego State University’s Outstanding Alumnus; Conservator of American Arts Award from American Conservatory Theater; the San Diego Press Club Headliner Award; San Diego Gentleman of Distinction Award; and a combined tribute from the Public Arts Advisory Council and the San Diego County Board of Supervisors. Mr. Noel was particularly proud of the following three honors representing education and theatre: Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters, University of San Diego; Honorary Doctorate in Fine Arts, San Diego State University; and the annual Awards for Excellence in Theatre named in his honor by the San Diego Theatre Critics Circle. In 2007, he received the National Medal of Arts—the nation’s highest honor for artistic excellence—in a ceremony at the White House. Craig Noel died on April 3, 2010 at the age of 94.
The Old Globe is known far and wide for its quality productions of great plays. San Diegans come to the Globe with the expectation of experiencing something very special: a theatrical production that makes them laugh or cry or think about the world in new ways. It is, indeed, the responsibility of a theatre company to fill that role. But for some San Diegans, a trip to Balboa Park to see a show is, for many reasons, not a possibility. With those San Diegans in mind, we created our new touring program, Globe for All.

Globe for All is designed to make Shakespeare’s work and the Globe’s artistic resources accessible and relevant to a wider audience by helping overcome whatever barriers—economic, geographic, or cultural—that limit their access to professional performing arts. The program features free tours of quality, professional productions, designed to be performed outside traditional theatres. Audiences will share an intimate, up-close, and visceral experience of live theatre that fosters a sense of community between the performer and the spectator. And they’ll experience those shows in cafeterias, community rooms, meeting rooms, and other non-traditional performance spaces that are accessible to them.

The inaugural Globe for All tour begins October 28, 2014 with Shakespeare’s All’s Well That Ends Well, directed by Old Globe Artistic Director Barry Edelstein. Edelstein’s experience with a similar program at The Public Theater in New York inspired him to bring the idea to San Diego.

Venues for the 2014 Globe for All tour include Centinela State Prison, Father Joe’s Villages, Jacobs Center for Neighborhood Innovation Celebration Hall, Naval Base San Diego, Veterans Village of San Diego, San Diego Central Library, Fourth District Seniors Resource Center at the George L. Stevens Senior Center, and the YWCA of San Diego County. In addition to the performance, some of the venues will host workshops and residencies with Old Globe teaching artists. These workshops, modeled on and including aspects of our innovative playwriting program Community Voices, will give interested participants the chance to explore their own imaginations through theatre.

For theatregoers wishing to see the show at The Old Globe, the tour will culminate with three low-cost performances in the Globe’s Hattox Hall November 7-9.

Launching a program like Globe for All is challenging and needs wide support. The Old Globe is grateful to The Legler Benbough Foundation, The Parker Foundation (Gerald T. and Inez Grant Parker), The Kenneth T. and Eileen L. Norris Foundation, and the County of San Diego’s Community Enhancement Program for their generous grants. Additional support is also provided by Jacobs Center for Neighborhood Innovation.
