PRODUCTION SPONSORS

HAL AND PAM FUSON

Hal and Pam Fuson became Globe regulars shortly after moving from Los Angeles to Encinitas in 1983. During their two children’s teenage years they subscribed as a family. The children went off to college while Hal and Pam continued gaining new insights by attending shows on evenings with Post-Show Forums. Hal served as the Globe’s Board Chair from 2011 through 2014, a voyage of discovery that engaged the couple in new and exciting challenges and reinforced for them the vital role The Old Globe plays in the cultural life of San Diego. They now often bring their grandchildren to Globe productions, anxiously waiting until the curtain comes down to hear how their young brains have processed the lines of Cole Porter or William Shakespeare.

SUSAN AND JOHN MAJOR

Susan and John Major have been active with the Globe since shortly after they moved to San Diego. Susan served on the Globe Board of Directors from 2003 to 2011. During that time, she also served on numerous Nominating and Search Committees as the Globe evolved and matured to the world-class team that it is now. John and Susan have always enjoyed the variety of theatre productions at the Globe, from shows in the original proscenium theatre to the theatre-in-the-round to the outdoor Shakespeare theatre—each providing its own unique experience. The Majors use the Globe for business entertaining and for great nights out by including new and old friends in their experiences. All in all, The Old Globe is a vital part of their San Diego lifestyle.

PAULA AND BRIAN POWERS

Paula Powers is pleased to be a Board member of The Old Globe, where she currently serves on the Executive and Nominating Committees. She and Brian have made Rancho Santa Fe their primary residence after living in New York, Hong Kong, Australia, and the Bay Area, where they still own a home. Paula earned her J.D. from the University of Michigan and specialized in Trusts and Estates, including work for private foundations and not-for-profits. Brian’s J.D. comes from the University of Virginia, and he is currently Chairman Emeritus of Hellman & Friedman LLC, a private equity firm in San Francisco. Paula is also a member of the Advisory Board of ODC, a San Francisco-based modern dance company, and sits on the board of the Rancho Santa Fe Foundation. They have sponsored numerous productions at the Globe, including Somewhere, Nobody Loves You, Other Desert Cities, and 2014’s Into the Woods and Dog and Pony. This year, the Powers are proud to sponsor both Ken Ludwig’s Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery and In Your Arms.

SHERYL AND HARVEY WHITE

During their long association with The Old Globe, Sheryl and Harvey White have played many leadership roles at the Theatre, each serving terms as Chair of the Board of Directors, with Harvey serving as Co-Chair of the Globe’s $75 million Capital and Endowment Campaign. Sheryl also holds the distinction of co-chairing nine successful Globe Galas. The Whites have been Season Sponsors for many years and, in addition to last year’s Bright Star, they have sponsored such productions as The Last Goodbye, The Times They Are A-Changin’, Dancing in the Dark, The First Wives Club, A Room with a View, and Hershey Felder in Maestro: The Art of Leonard Bernstein. Additionally, they sponsored Lost in Yonkers, the inaugural production in the arena theatre that bears their name in recognition of their significant $6 million Capital Campaign gift. Sheryl continues to serve on the Globe’s Finance Committee, and Harvey is Board Secretary and a member of the Executive Committee.

VICKI AND CARL ZEIGER

Vicki and Carl Zeiger are pleased to sponsor the world premiere musical In Your Arms after sponsoring last year’s acclaimed world premiere of Bright Star. Vicki, a native San Diegan, retired as Vice President of Human Resources from SDG&E. She started her relationship with the Globe as a child, attending Summer Shakespeare performances with her family, and she joined the Board in 2011. As Incoming Chair, she also currently serves on the Executive, Development, and Nominating Committees. She co-chaired the 2012 and 2015 Globe Galas and served on the Search Committee for the theatre’s Artistic Director, which brought Barry Edelstein to the Globe. Carl, a retired businessman from the computer software industry, is also an ardent supporter of the Globe. Together they support many other San Diego organizations, including A Step Beyond, a multifaceted after-school program for underserved children, of which Vicki is a founding board member.

OUR THANKS

Welcome to the Globe!

I love to dance! But what I do on the dance floor, and what tonight’s amazingly talented performers do on stage, belong in two entirely distinct categories! The company of In Your Arms represents a cross-section from the Broadway, film, and international and television competition arenas, and each is at the top of his or her respective realm. Tonight you will see gorgeous, moving love stories from America’s top playwrights and writers, all using very few words, in a fabulous interpretation masterminded by an award-winning director-choreographer and set to the music of one of Broadway’s best composers. This is one of the things the Globe does best—bringing together the country’s finest artists to create a unique and unforgettable night of performance for all of San Diego, and I am exceedingly proud to be part of this receptive crowd.

As your Globe Board Chair and a firm believer in the transformative powers of the arts, I am pleased to represent and support this amazing institution. We are grateful to the production sponsors: an anonymous donor, Hal and Pam Fuson, Susan and John Major, Paula and Brian Powers, Sheryl and Harvey White, and Vicki and Carl Zeiger, as well as Elizabeth Dewberry, Artist Sponsor for Stephen Flaherty, and Jeanette Stevens, Artist Sponsor for Christopher Gattelli.

In this, our 80th Anniversary year, I am especially proud of the many ongoing community outreach programs we offer year-round, including free student matinees and sensory-friendly performances of The Grinch and other productions. Globe for All will once again range the county November 10-22 with Much Ado About Nothing, presenting free Shakespeare to those who for many reasons cannot make it onto our campus. And I urge you to continue to follow the careers of our amazing M.F.A. candidates as they step up to more challenging roles, both on the Festival stage and in As You Like It, which runs November 14-22, under the aegis of the Old Globe/USD M.F.A. Program.

Your philanthropy makes a difference. We ask you to invest in the Globe and help San Diego’s largest not-for-profit performing arts organization close the 45% funding gap between the total cost of producing each show and earned income from ticket sales. We are grateful to our audiences and supporters for everything you do, including purchasing tickets, attending performances, and spreading the word about our productions and other programs with your friends. And we are grateful for your adventurous and open-minded spirit, which encourages us to produce the best in entertaining and rewarding theatre.

Thank you for being here, and for being part of the Globe family.

THE PLAY

FROM THE ARTISTIC DIRECTOR

The Old Globe’s 2015-2016 theatre season opens with the world premiere of a work that is genuinely original. Fresh and unusual, In Your Arms defies easy categorization. It is an audacious piece, at once very idiosyncratic and very daring, yet fashioned from elements that are familiar and even traditional: dance, theatre, and music. They’re mixed into a hybrid form, new and unlike anything we’ve seen before.

Like most more conventional forms of theatre, In Your Arms is narrative-driven, and its narratives are written by playwrights. Unconventionally, those playwrights do their work without that thing that is the essence of the playwright’s art: dialogue. The “text” of the show is expressed instead physically, through dance. And its performers, all highly acclaimed and hugely experienced dancers, act their roles not by speaking but by moving through space, dancing to a richly composed and orchestrated score that also tells stories through rhythm, melody, harmony, and tone. The ten writers whose scenarios make up the show represent a wide array of dramatic styles and come from a number of cultural backgrounds. The stories they’ve created travel around the world and across time, and they are told through dance styles every bit as diverse. A simple theme ties it all together. Its power is great enough, its flexibility is considerable enough, and its scope is capacious enough to encompass this huge span of material. That theme is romantic love.

In Your Arms is a love story. It’s about finding love and losing it, yearning for love and winning it, discovering love for the first time and waxing nostalgic for love having had it. It’s about love suppressed and love triumphant, love celebrated and love scorned, love shot through with shame and love purely ecstatic. And that love, whether dark or light, happy or sad, is suffused with an intense and special beauty.

Beauty is the one word that for me best describes In Your Arms. We don’t talk about beauty in the theatre very much. We know it in the visual arts and the musical arts and even in the literary arts, but somehow in the dramatic arts the word isn’t as current. That’s too bad. Beauty is one of the theatre’s greatest effects. Alive and in front of us, happening in the here and now, beauty on stage has a visceral strength, a physical manifestation.

It impacts us with an unusual force that stays with us long after the final curtain has fallen. In Your Arms is made of that kind of beauty, a beauty that transports us, moves us, and delights us. I saw a workshop presentation of it over a year ago, and specific moments and images from it are fresh in my memory even now, because they were so gorgeously, lushly beautiful.

I love this show, and I love that the Globe is able to produce it. We can do so thanks to the extraordinary makers of beauty who’ve assembled here. They are at the height of achievement in their fields. Among them they have amassed an astounding 18 Tony Awards, four Pulitzer Prizes, six Pulitzer finalist distinctions, three Emmy Awards, and two Academy Awards. I know this amazing group of talents will forgive me for singling out two of them. Composer Stephen Flaherty is one of the giants of the American stage. He gives us a shimmering and sweeping score of uncommon beauty. And director-choreographer Christopher Gattelli is quite simply a wizard. His work here is fearless, innovative, and unceasingly inventive, fashioned with a keen intelligence and heart as big as the ocean. I’m honored to have him, and all of these spectacular artists, in the Globe family.

And I’m so very pleased to bring this work to our open-minded and always receptive audience. Your appetite for the new and the excellent is the true strength of the Globe, and the magnetic force that draws great artists to our institution. You give me the confidence to program a work as bold and original as this one.

Thanks for coming. Enjoy the show.

LEARNING HOW TO DANCE ALL OVER AGAIN

DIRECTOR-CHOREOGRAPHER CHRISTOPHER GATTELLI

ON THE CREATION OF IN YOUR ARMS

Interview by Danielle Mages Amato

Christopher Gattelli.

How did the idea for the show develop?

It started in 2007 in a meeting with producer Jennifer Manocherian. She called me in and said that she was interested in working on a dance show. The question we were left with was: what kind of dance show? At the time, I was doing South Pacific at Lincoln Center, and one day during rehearsals I was walking through the hallways, and I noticed the names of all the great playwrights on the wall: Terrence McNally, Alfred Uhry, and Christopher Durang, to name just a few. It struck me then that might be an interesting idea: having different playwrights write original plays but to tell them through dance. No spoken words yet based on a common theme. Jennifer loved the idea, so we started approaching playwrights, people we loved working with or had always wanted to work with.

It was an interesting process, as some of the writers knew immediately when we asked them what they were going to write, and some writers got back to us after a month and said that they weren't sure how to do this without their words. Then during a meeting with Douglas Carter Beane, the idea of music came up, and he suggested that if they were original plays, maybe an original score would be a good idea, and suggested Stephen Flaherty. After hearing the idea, Stephen quickly jumped on, and then we were off and running.

Even without words, can you distinguish the different writers by their styles?

I did a lot of research on every writer we asked, reading many of their plays or going to see their work, and after doing so was able to notice and really dig into the common themes and styles of each of the writers. Stephen and I tried very hard to keep in mind their overall aesthetic when creating each piece. But I also feel that the group of artists we've gathered are so brilliant that they already came to us with such specific voices, that their work already goes beyond words.

In Your Arms includes an extremely wide range of dance styles. How did you go about matching a particular style of dance to each vignette?

Each piece was unique. For example, in Nilo Cruz's piece, he specifically indicates a tango and a flamenco; he was very articulate and specific about which styles should be used and when and why. For other pieces, it was about what style would best serve each play—what would help tell the story best, what the strengths were of the dancers who were performing in their piece, and what new energy we needed in the evening as a whole.

What was the development process like with Stephen and the dancers?

Stephen and I would start by getting together and talking through the play in emotional beats. Then we assigned musical moments to each beat, and figured out where the different themes would occur. After that, Stephen wrote fabrics of music, specific to the moments we had discussed. Then we got in a room with dancers and staged the piece as a play. We walked through the piece without any dance steps to see how it moved—how it could move—and see how the story would be told. Eventually we started putting specific dance vocabulary into the blocking, and if it felt right, finally set dance to it. Then Stephen took the music and structured it to the length and blocking—the best way I can describe it would be like scoring a short film—a score that had specific hits and beats that lined up with the dance. But Stephen also did one better. There is a four-note theme that runs through the entire show. A repeating variation of the opening that flows through each of the pieces, so they are all connected, even though there are so many different styles. It's truly a genius score that he was able to create for the show.

"The process felt a little bit like jumping off the diving board."

It sounds like the process required all of you to work in different musical styles than you were used to—even to create a whole new way of working.

Definitely. All of us had to flex muscles we had never flexed and learn forms we never had to study. I consider myself pretty versatile when it comes to different forms, but this project went above and beyond. I had never studied flamenco, or tango, or ballroom, or martial arts. It's been kind of like learning how to dance all over again, truly. But I wanted to be as true to each style as I could, to honor the form, as I knew it would have to support each story in its own way. And I know the same was true for Stephen. It was the most unique process I've ever been part of—and without question the most collaborative.

Did you imagine the sets, lights, and costumes as unifying these 10 different stories in some way?

Yes. Over the course of the process, aside from Stephen's score, we added a visual element that also helps unify the piece. It takes place at the Casa di Julietta in Verona, which is said to be the location where Shakespeare was inspired to write Romeo and Juliet. There's a wall there covered with letters and mementos. People come from all over the world to place them on the wall. They write letters to Juliet, or their wishes for love, or personal stories of their own true love—past, present, or future. I felt that it then also honors one of the greatest playwrights and one of the greatest love stories ever told, and it connects our incredible group of playwrights through the theme they were given. Passing the torch in a way, and expressing the idea that there are countless stories to tell and they are all part of a whole. Then the set, lights, and costumes can be specific for each story while having a common visual vocabulary.

What do you hope the audience's experience of watching the show will be like?

I feel that people will see many flashes of their lives over the course of the evening, and because of the way it is presented, through movement, what is non-verbal can be interpreted in ways that I'm hoping makes them connect to the show on a deeper level. ■

CRAIG NOEL

(Founding Director) was born on August 25, 1915, and in 2015 The Old Globe celebrates the 100th birthday of this theatre legend who was instrumental in cultivating the San Diego arts community. Noel was first appointed director in 1939, directing 15 productions prior to World War II. Since then he directed more than 200 plays of all styles and periods and produced an additional 270 productions. His vision for The Old Globe resulted in the establishment of the Shakespeare Festival and the San Diego Junior Theatre in the late '40s, the expansion to two theatres in the '50s, Globe Educational Tours in the '70s, and Teatro Meta and the Old Globe/University of San Diego Graduate Theatre Program in the '80s. During the 1940s, Mr. Noel served as dialogue director for the 20th Century Fox Studios and was the director of the Ernie Pyle Theatre in Tokyo. Described by Variety as the éminence grise of San Diego theatre, Mr. Noel is one of the few San Diegans to have had an entire year (1987) proclaimed in his honor, and to be named one of San Diego's "Living Treasures." He was a founder of the California Theatre Council and a former vice president of the California Confederation of the Arts. His numerous honors include the San Diego Union-Tribune list of 25 persons who shaped the city's history; the Governor's Award for the Arts; University of Arizona Alumni Association's Outstanding Citizen, for his contribution to their Fine Arts department; San Diego State University's Outstanding Alumnus; Conservator of American Arts Award from American Conservatory Theater; the San Diego Press Club Headliner Award; San Diego Gentleman of Distinction Award; and a combined tribute from the Public Arts Advisory Council and the San Diego County Board of Supervisors. Mr. Noel was particularly proud of the following three honors representing education and theatre: Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters, University of San Diego; Honorary Doctorate in Fine Arts, San Diego State University; and the annual Awards for Excellence in Theatre named in his honor by the San Diego Theatre Critics Circle. In 2007, he received the National Medal of Arts—the nation's highest honor for artistic excellence—in a ceremony at the White House. Craig Noel died on April 3, 2010 at the age of 94.

IN THE COMMUNITY

By Mike Hausberg

In the 80 years since its founding in 1935, The Old Globe has grown into the sixth-largest regional theatre in the country and has focused on presenting the very best theatre possible to the people of San Diego, whether it be world premiere musicals, revived classics, new emerging voices, or the works of William Shakespeare. As a not-for-profit regional theatre, The Old Globe's primary responsibility is to serve the community in which it exists. Many San Diegans, however, face obstacles coming to the Globe's theatres—be they financial, geographical, or cultural—but still have an interest in the performing arts.

Program) who not only performed, but also spent time talking with audiences before and after the show. These audience members shared their stories, discussed what they enjoyed about the performance, and asked questions to learn more about theatre. Shakespeare was not just a mere visitor; he was welcomed warmly into the community as a new friend.

For some, the Globe for All tour was their first experience seeing a piece of live theatre, and for others, it was an exciting return to the art form. One teenage girl, who had never before seen a play, said after the show directed by Rob Melrose, beginning November 10. This comedic masterpiece, which follows the battle of wits between would-be lovers Benedick and Beatrice, will reach even deeper into the community by expanding the number of groups and venues it visits. Like last year, the Globe will present several low-cost performances at the Globe, giving our regular audiences a chance to see this special program at work first-hand. Audiences will also be able to attend pre- and post-show workshops and activities, allowing them to engage with the material in fun and fascinating ways.

The Old Globe hopes that this annual Shakespeare tour will be the first of numerous outreach programs that will allow more of San Diego's communities to experience first-rate theatre. Globe for All embodies the guiding principles of the organization's engagement work: that theatre, and Shakespeare in particular, are necessary to live a full and rich life, and that everyone has a fundamental right to experience them. The Globe has heard the exuberant call from people all over the county, and with these engagement activities the Globe hopes to inspire as many people as possible to fall in love with theatre—and perhaps even create their own.

The Old Globe has recognized this need and has committed itself to serving communities in San Diego that do not have regular access to the arts. Last year the Globe took steps toward achieving this goal by launching Globe for All, which brings professional Shakespeare to community groups and venues across the county, in locations as varied as military bases, recreation centers, libraries, centers for the elderly, homeless shelters, and correctional facilities. Artistic Director Barry Edelstein directed All's Well That Ends Well, featuring a company of professional local actors (many of them graduates of the Old Globe/USD M.F.A.

at Father Joe's Village, a homeless shelter in downtown San Diego, "You brought light into our dark tunnel." A man at the 4th District Senior Center, who had recently turned 95 years old, was seeing theatre for the first time. The Globe for All tour reminded others of their first experiences attending shows as children with their families, delighting them with the opportunity to pass on the tradition.

This season the Globe will build upon last year's success and the community's encouragement to present a tour of Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing,

Following a performance of All's Well That Ends Well last year, an inmate at Centinela State Prison said, "How amazing it is that we who seem so easily overlooked can be given such a pleasure." Another said, "It is good to know we are not forgotten." The magic and enrichment of theatre are not exclusive to a select group. The Old Globe will continue to find new ways of meeting community members where they live and feeding their desire for live performance. The initiative's name itself defines its duty to those it serves: The Globe, and the arts in general, really are for all. ■

A LOOK BACK: RISING FROM THE ASHES

(top) Valeda Turner bids adieu to the Old Globe Theatre amid the ashes of the fire in 1978. (left) A group of men, including one dressed as Shakespeare, accept donations to rebuild the theatre after it was destroyed. (lower right) Firemen douse the Old Globe Theatre during the fire.

As Balboa Park celebrates its centennial in 2015, The Old Globe also marks a major milestone: our 80th Anniversary. Throughout the year, our programs will feature articles and photo essays looking back over eight decades of Globe history.

In the early dawn hours of March 8, 1978, the Old Globe Theatre, home of 322 productions between 1935 and 1978, was destroyed by an arson fire. Fortunately, the administrative offices, rehearsal hall, dressing rooms, scenery and costume shops, and the Cassius Carter Centre Stage were spared from the flames. But the loss of the Globe Theatre hit artists and audiences hard.

The rebuilding began immediately. The immediate need for a space to produce that summer's San Diego National Shakespeare Festival resulted in the construction of the Festival Stage, an award-winning outdoor theatre that was completed in just 100 days.

To raise the money to rebuild the Globe, Craig Noel used this dark moment to rally San Diegans behind the theatre, reminding them of its value and importance. In an outpouring of love and loyalty, the city held car washes and bake sales, gave generously to a telethon campaign, and in a true show of grassroots support, donated over 6 million dollars to build the new theatre. Out of the ashes of adversity, The Old Globe forged a community stronger than ever, and in 1982, the new 581-seat Old Globe Theatre opened with a production of Shakespeare's As You Like It.

Just two years later, the Festival Stage was destroyed by another arson fire. Again the Globe rebuilt, this time under the leadership of Jack O'Brien, and the current 612-seat Lowell Davies Festival Theatre was constructed in 1985. ■

LEAD ARTIST SPONSOR FOR CHRISTOPHER GATTELLI

JEANETTE STEVENS

A Chicago native, Jeanette Stevens was initially engaged in the arts as a devoted, passionate student of dance. After graduating from Indiana University, she moved to California and enjoyed a 10-year career teaching in public and private elementary schools. Dance remained a fascination for her, along with travel and an ever-expanding involvement in many other arts disciplines. Jeanette retired from a public relations career at SDG&E and currently serves on the board of both San Diego Youth Symphony and La Jolla Music Society. She continues to engage enthusiastically with arts organizations nationwide. A longtime Old Globe subscriber and patron, Jeanette remains in awe of the theatre's unique artistry, its leadership, its education and community outreach, and its exhilarating shows! She remains enduringly grateful for being so warmly and enthusiastically welcomed into the Old Globe family.

ARTIST SPONSOR FOR STEPHEN FLAHERTY

ELIZABETH DEWBERRY

Elizabeth Dewberry has loved the theatre ever since she played a Munchkin in fifth grade at the Birmingham Children's Theater in Alabama. She wrote two full-length plays and several shorts that have been professionally produced at various regional theatres, and she has written four novels: His Lovely Wife (Harcourt), Sacrament of Lies (Putnam), and Break the Heart of Me and Many Things Have Happened Since He Died (Doubleday). MORRIS MACMARTEN

SUPPORT THE SENSORY-FRIENDLY GRINCH THIS YEAR!

DOUGLAS GATES

Steve Gunderson, as Old Max, shares The Grinch with guests.

Each year, thousands of families flock to The Old Globe to share in the joy of attending Dr. Seuss' How the Grinch Stole Christmas!, one of San Diego's favorite holiday traditions. And our annual sensory-friendly performance, which makes the show more comfortable for children and adults on the autism spectrum or with other special needs, gives everyone the chance to experience the fun in a safe, accepting environment.

Now is your chance to sponsor this special performance of The Grinch and ensure that families with sensitivity concerns can experience the magic of live theatre free of judgment and anxiety. The Old Globe team makes slight modifications to the lighting and sound designs, and audience members are welcome to take a break in designated safe zones in the lobby. Friendly volunteers and a chance to "meet your seat" before the show round out the experience. It's an exciting day in the theatre—and an experience cherished by all in attendance.

Don't miss your opportunity to support the sensory-friendly performance of The Grinch and give the gift of theatre to everyone in the San Diego community this holiday season.
